Reds May Claim Far South Land

WASHINGTON (UP)—Diplomats speculated today that the Soviet Union is preparing to lay formal claim to a large part of the Antarctic continent.

This speculation came when U.S. officials said they were "mystified" at a new Soviet diplomatic move, in which Moscow warned the world that it would recognize no international settlement of Antarctic claims to which it was not a party.

On the surface, the Russian move—which came in a note delivered here Friday—appeared to be a belated reference to an unsuccessful American diplomatic venture into the Antarctic picture two years ago.

At the time, the United States suggested to the seven nations with claims in the Antarctic that some form of internationalization of the south polar continent be worked out.

The American suggestion, which in effect was rejected, was designed to resolve the conflicting claims of Britain, Argentina and Chile to certain Antarctic territory.

The Soviet attitude is like that of the United States in some respects. The State Department has said repeatedly that this country makes no claim to Antarctic land, and does not recognize the claims of other nations.

But some U.S. explorations in the Antarctic have been so thorough that many diplomats acknowledge the United States legitimately could lay claim to large sections of it. The United States also has indicated very clearly that it expects to be a party to any future settlement of the controversy.

Stowaway Cannot Prove Birthplace, Ordered To Leave

QUEBEC (CP)—Anthony Norton, young stowaway who made a hit with passengers during his free passage on the liner Empress of Scotland from Liverpool to Quebec, has been ordered deported, immigration officials said today.

The 23-year-old stowaway, claiming to be a Canadian of Polish descent and giving his home town as Canfield, Ont., was caught before the liner arrived here last week.

Norton has appealed against deportation and he is being held until immigration headquarters in Ottawa rules on the appeal.

N. C. Hebert, chief of the immigration office here, said Norton had failed to convince the board of inquiry that he is a Canadian.

He said Norton claimed to have been born in "Canfield, Ont.," but that the commission's inquiry "has so far found this claim unfounded."

Mr. Hebert said Norton will be returned to England unless Ottawa rules he may be admitted, or finds that he is a Canadian citizen.

Flood Aid Sent

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—London school children, rallying to a call from the local Red Cross, have speeded more than seven tons of everything from soup to nuts in canned goods to flood-stricken Winnipeg. A freight car load of goods left the city Friday afternoon.

WINNIPEG FREE FROM FLOOD

Red River Falls Below Official Mark Brought City Close To Disaster

WINNIPEG (CP)—The Red River flood of 1950, worst of a century, ended officially today in Greater Winnipeg.

At 7 a.m. C.D.T. an unexcited voice at the James Avenue pumping station, where the river level is read, announced: "Eighteen feet—exactly."

This is the point where all flooding in the twin cities of Winnipeg and St. Boniface stops. The muddy Red still was more than 10 feet above its average level through the year—but it was more than 12 feet below the peak of 30.3 feet it reached three weeks ago.

Greater Winnipeg then was within an ace of army-directed, mass evacuation that would have slashed its normal 350,000 population to a mere 75,000 "fit males and working females."

At 31 feet, electricity and gas supplies probably would have failed. At 32.5 feet most of the downtown area would have been under water. "Operation Black-boy," the army's emergency plan, would have gone into effect.

Instead, Blackboy was pigeon-holed as the river dropped. Brig. R. A. A. Norton's flood-control headquarters in the Legislative Buildings were closed June 1 and civil governments took over the multi-million-dollar job of rehabilitation.

April 21 the river went above flood stage in Greater Winnipeg. By May 6 civic authorities had thrown up their hands, admitted they could do no more alone. Premier Douglas L. Campbell called in the military.

Five thousand servicemen and perhaps 50,000 civilian volunteers worked on the sandbags, threw up 20 miles of solid dikes, but before the Red stopped rising, fed by melting snow from its huge watershed in North Dakota and Minnesota, much of the metropolitan area and almost 700 square miles of southern Manitoba were inundated.

POLICE SEEK BOY SUFFERING MENINGITIS

Gypsy Parents Take Boy More Dangerous Than Criminal Away

TOLEDO, O. (UP)—Ohio Michigan State Police joined the search today for a gypsy boy sick with meningitis and described as "more dangerous than any criminal."

The boy, eight-year-old Stanley Mitchell, was brought to Riverside Hospital Friday by his parents, suffering from what doctors at the hospital diagnosed as a form of meningitis.

Dr. Claypool of the hospital staff told the parents, who gave their names as Mr. and Mrs. Mark Mitchell of Battle Creek, Mich., the boy would need a spinal puncture. They grabbed the child and fled.

FILED AGAIN

Shortly after noon, they entered the office of child specialist Dr. Donald C. Mebane. He examined the child and came to the same conclusion—that the boy had meningitis. He offered to take the child to a hospital and have a spinal puncture made for definite proof as to the type of meningitis. Once again the couple seized the boy and fled, but Dr. Mebane got their license number, Michigan JA 6862. He said the car was a red Ford convertible.

Dr. Walter H. Hartung, Toledo medical health officer, said: "If he has cerebral meningitis, he may infect other children or even adults."

He indicated that a man named Miller—known locally as King of the Gypsies—might have knowledge of the Mitchells' whereabouts, but said he had not been located yet.

Police searched two local carnivals, but found nothing.

May Prosecute Red Dean Backers

VANCOUVER (BUP)—A conference will be held between Attorney-General Gordon Wisner and Vancouver's police commission on the possibility of prosecution of the sponsors of the recent Sunday peace meeting address by Dr. Hewlett Johnson, the so-called "Red Dean" of Canterbury.

The police commission decided Friday to seek clarification by the Attorney-General of the city police powers in enforcing the Lord's Day Act in connection with the meeting. City prosecutor has asked the commission to instruct him in the matter of issuing of a fiat against the Red Dean's meeting last May 21.

Village, Big Gas Depot Safe As Fire Turns Off

LEWISPORTE, Nfld. (BUP)—A raging forest fire which threatened to explode 2,000,000 gallons of stored gasoline veered away from Lewisporte in northern Newfoundland today as fire fighters drove the flames back to a point four miles from Lewisporte.

All available volunteers from the village of 1,600 were thrown into the battle to stem the flames, which Friday night appeared in danger of reaching the village and igniting the tank-stored gasoline.

Deputy Minister of National Resources Frederick Rowe said there was now no "immediate danger" to the village and 10 other settlements threatened by the forest fires.

The only other serious fire now raging in the province, Rowe said, was near Grand Falls, where a blaze burned close to the Anglo-Newfoundland corporation's property.

Despite Rowe's assurance the blaze at Lewisporte had been stemmed, however, all possible precautions were being taken in case the fire should be fanned by a wind change in the direction of Lewisporte.

Planes and ships had sped here with emergency fire-fighting supplies under orders to stand by for possible mass evacuation.

All women, children and elderly persons were told to pack and be ready to leave at a moment's notice. Every able-bodied man in the area joined forest rangers and woodsmen in fire-fighting duty.

At St. John's, Newfoundland's provincial capital, Deputy Welfare Minister Frederick Rowe said his department was preparing to send food here if evacuation to other coastal points became necessary.

The fire faced to within two and a half miles of the fuel tanks Friday night before a gusty wind that reached 25 to 30 miles an hour slackened. Early today the Dominion Public Weather Office clocked winds at 15 miles an hour.

Fire-fighters' work was hampered by lack of equipment. Additional men and lengths of hose were rushed here in railway flatcars from the Gander air base 35 miles away. Smoke covered the field with a heavy pall.

15,000 Chickens Destroyed By Fire

NEW WESTMINSTER (BUP)—Fifteen thousand chickens were killed in a fire in Surrey, near New Westminster, this morning which caused $50,000 damage.

South Westminster fire chief J. L. Cook who handled the blaze, said the fire broke out at 4:20 a.m. in the west end of the large Boliver Hatcheries. "There were about 15,000 chickens killed and the damage would run as high as $50,000," he said.

Several thousand other chickens were saved by the firemen. Cause of the blaze is unknown.

Wife Of Senator Vandenberg Dies

WASHINGTON (UP)—Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenberg, wife of the Republican Senator from Michigan, died in her Wardman Park Hotel suite early today after a lingering illness. She was 68.

At her bedside when she died at 1:20 P.M. were her husband and two step-children, Arthur Jr. and Mrs. Elizabeth Phleffer of Grand Rapids, Mich. The cause of death was not announced.

When news of Mrs. Vandenberg's death reached the Senate, then meeting in an extraordinary night session, the chamber unanimously adopted a resolution expressing regret and extending sympathies to her "illustrious and bereaved husband."

Will Refuse To Handle 'Hot' Lumber, They Say

VANCOUVER (BUP)—Longshorem indicated today they would back a scheduled June 15 strike of 32,000 coastal lumber workers by refusing to handle "hot timber."

James Darwood, district president of the International Longshoremens' Association, said 1,700 I.L.A. members had refused to touch "hot timber" in a six-week loggers' strike in 1946 and "probably" would do so again if the loggers stop work next week.

Meanwhile Stewart Alsbury, president of the British Columbia district of the C.I.O. International Woodworkers of America, said his union had reached an agreement with longshoremens to make its strike 100 per cent effective.

Alsbury gave no details of the agreement, designed to tie up a major part of a $390,000,000 industry.

The loggers' strike appeared virtually certain to take place as scheduled. Woodworkers voted in government-supervised ballots Thursday to quit June 15 if coast logging companies refused them a general 17-cent hourly wage increase, a five-day, 40-hour week and a union shop.

OPERATORS FORM

But the operators appeared equally determined to stand by recommendations handed down by a conciliation board on which the companies, the union and the provincial government all were represented.

The mediators had suggested they give the loggers a 9-cent boost, raise cooks' and bunkhouse workers' pay 5½ cents an hour and sign a union "maintenance of membership" clause in their contract.

Union and company representatives blamed each other for the tie-up which would stall logging operations at a time when lumber is urgently needed by builders across Canada, in Britain and elsewhere in the world.

Bob Morrison, an operators' spokesman, said "if the industry is closed down by another futile strike, history will repeat itself for sure, with the blame laid solely at the door of the I.W.A. officials who must accept responsibility for it."

ISLAND VOTES

Friday, Vancouver Island employees of Blonell, Stewart and Welch Ltd. voted in favor of walking out with other woodsmen if their demands are not met by June 15.

At the main sawmill at Port Alberni, employees voted 460 in favor of striking against 95 against. At Great Central Lake sawmill, the vote was 220 yes and 40 no; at Camp Eight, 127 yes and 56 no; at Sarita River Camp, 77 yes and 44 no; at Frank's River Camp, 162 yes and 79 no; East Coast Camp, 327 yes and 120 no.

West Rejects Reds' Demands

BERLIN (AP)—The Western allies formally rejected today a Russian demand for the withdrawal of all occupation troops from Berlin as the price for holding city-wide elections.

The three Western commanders by letter informed the Soviet deputy commandant that they back the stand of West Berlin's city government which already has turned down the Russian demand.

The West also rejected in detail most of the other seven conditions outlined by the Russians.

Sandbag Dikes Cast Up Against Rainy Lake Flood

FORT FRANCES, Ont. (BUP)—Sandbag dikes were thrown up around homes on the shore of flooding Rainy Lake today as estimated $1,000,000.

The lake was less than two-tenths of a foot from reaching an all-time record flood level here after a rise of three-quarters of an inch yesterday. It had climbed 5.3 feet since May 6 and was 4.5 feet above flood stage.

Extensive damage was reported in Point Park, three miles from here, but private property was suffering most. Lanes and trees were on the rampage.

Six Of Chief Japanese Reds Go Into Hiding

TOKYO (UP)—Six Japanese Communist leaders went underground today and another was jailed for acting against the occupation.

The six leaders disappeared to escape Japanese police. But Communist cell leader Hidejaro Ikeda wasn't so lucky. Police seized anti-occupation leaflets in his home and arrested him.

This brought to seven the number of Communists arrested since Wednesday morning. In addition 41 have been purged from participating in public activity and eight sentenced to prison terms of five to 10 years following a Communist-sponsored attack against five U.S. soldiers last Memorial Day.

Meanwhile, police at the huge Yokosuka naval base, 30 miles south of here, notified the local Communist chapter it must not display the Red flag and that a ban on demonstrations would be extended indefinitely.

Police here raided the Red publication Shin Sumida with the intention of arresting its editor, Toichi Iizuka, but found he had fled.

Twenty policemen also descended on the home of Teichiro Sudo, accused of posting an "open letter to MacArthur" on walls in Tokyo. He, too, had fled.

Watchman Dies With Stock In Stable Blaze

CHICAGO (AP)—A watchman perished and between 17 and 22 race horses burned to death Friday night in a fire which destroyed the huge barn on the Emil Denmark farm near suburban Hinsdale.

Denmark estimated the loss at $700,000.

Among horses that died in the fire was Curcio, which last year won the $75,850 Futurity at Washington Park race track. Lightning struck the roof of the barn during a severe electrical storm, setting fire to some 200 tons of hay in the loft.

Frank Nemecek, 48, the watchman who died in the flames, attempted to rescue some of the frightened animals but was driven back by the intense heat. Nemecek apparently was overcome by smoke.

'Being Kidnapped,' Missing Ontario Girl Told Woman In Tourist Camp

HAMILTON, Ont. (CP)—A girl who called herself Mabel Crumback was seen Friday at a tourist camp in nearby Ancaster.

She told a story of being held prisoner by a man who was with her and of being forced to dye her dark hair blonde.

Except for the blonde hair, she resembled the 19-year-old girl who disappeared from her home in the Toronto suburb of York Township May 28.

Her pleas that police be notified of her plight went unheeded by Mrs. Wesley Jenne, wife of the tourist camp operator, until several hours after the couple had driven away in an automobile. Mrs. Jenne said she thought at the time that the girl had a hangover from a late party.

The Crumback girl also was reported seen Friday night on a downtown Hamilton street. Patricia Margette, 25, told police a girl answering Mabel's description alighted from an automobile and asked her about buses for Toronto.

"I could not quite understand what she was saying," said Miss Margette. "She sounded as if she might have been drinking."

Miss Margette said this happened about 7:30 p.m., several hours after the tourist-camp incident.

Mrs. Jenne said the girl, nervous and unsteady on her feet, kept repeating, "I'm Mabel Crumback."

She quoted the girl as saying: "I've told many people about what's happening, but they all thought I was crazy. You must have heard about me. The paper is full of it. Please call the police and you will be paid for it. My father and mother will be worried."

Mrs. Jenne said the girl blurted out her strange story in frightened whispers after she had showed her to a washroom.

"That's my husband, but I don't want him near me," the girl said with reference to her companion, a tall man between 30 and 35 years of age with light brown hair and a harelip.

"See my hair! It's blonde now. He made me bleach it and he dyed it. It used to be nearly jet black once. No, it sure isn't my natural color."

The man seemed sober and spoke quietly, Mrs. Jenne said.

"He rather gave the impression that this was a girl he had run into at a party and that he was trying to baby her along and get her straightened out before he took her back home," Mrs. Jenne told police.

(In Toronto, the girl's parents said that, to the best of their knowledge, Mabel never kept company with the companion of the girl at the tourist camp.)

Mrs. Jenne said the girl seemed puzzled at one time and said to herself: "What have I got on?" Then, with a look of recognition, she said aloud: "Oh, it's my wedding dress."

It was a sheer pink dress with lace at the throat.

After ordering some bacon and eggs, which she did not eat, the girl went with Mrs. Jenne to a room, where she told her story.

After speaking incoherently for several minutes, the girl returned to the car, where the man was waiting, and they drove away.

Western Rail Workers Vote For Strike Action

Reds Planning War But Talk Peace—Truman

ST. LOUIS (AP)—President Truman today bitterly accused Soviet Russia of preaching peace while "fomenting aggression and preparing for war."

Using language like a prosecuting attorney, he declared Russia's leaders, "with a cynical disregard for the hopes of mankind," have been "an obstacle to peace."

At the same time, he declared that Russia's threat of a third world war is being "offset by the growing strength of the free world" and that the United States is enlisted "for the duration" in the struggle to preserve peace.

The President's prepared speech, a vigorous U.S. answer to the Russian peace propaganda offensive, fairly bristled with charges against Russia.

Time and time again he mentioned Russia by name as he indicted the Soviet Union for:

1. "Maintaining the largest peacetime armed force in history, far greater than it needs for the defence of its own boundaries."

2. Seeking to extend the boundaries of their totalitarian control "by means of infiltration, subversion, propaganda and indirect aggression."

3. Talking democracy but setting up "dictatorships."

4. Proclaiming national independence but imposing "national slavery."

5. Turning the school children of Eastern Germany "into the same kind of pitiful robots that marched into hopeless battle for Hitler."

Truman's words were interpreted as part of an all-out verbal counter-offensive against Russia's "peace" propaganda moves in the cold war.

The President spoke at the dedication of a memorial to the President Thomas Jefferson and early pioneers and settlers of the western part of the United States.

RATTLER KILLED IN EDMONTON

EDMONTON (CP)—A 52-inch prairie rattlesnake made a mysterious—and brief—appearance on a downtown Edmonton street. It is believed to have come here in a railway shipment of merchandise.

Lloyd Mangrum Takes Lead In U.S. Open Golf

ARDMORE, Pa. (AP)—Lloyd Mangrum, the 1946 champion from Niles, Ill., carved a sub-par 37-32-69 over the Merion Golf Club today to take an early third-round lead in the National Open Golf championship with 211.

The wiry 35-year-old veteran thus wrested the temporary lead from E. J. (Dutch) Harrison, who took a 40-33-73, which put his total at 212.

Harrison started poorly, going two over on the first hole but rallied to play the last nine in one under par.

Mangrum, who won the Fort Wayne, Ind., open last week, had earlier rounds of 72-70 over the par 36-34-70 Merion East course.

John Palmer of Badin, N.C., fired an even par 70 for a three-quarter mark of 213.

Fifty-one golfers set out on the final 36 holes this morning in pursuit of E. J. (Dutch) Harrison, who, with a 139, had a lead of one stroke.

After a light sprinkle which didn't slow the course much, the sun came out and another hot, humid day was promised.

It's calculated that rain would be a boon to such veterans as Harrison, who is 40, and Ben Hogan, 37, who is playing on battered legs injured in an auto accident 17 months ago. Harrison won the Canadian Open last year at Toronto St. George's.

Defending champion Cary Middlecott and Hogan followed. Middlecott had a 142, Hogan a 141.

Cast Huge Majority To Back Wage-Hour Demand

WINNIPEG (CP)—Overwhelming approval of strike action failing a peaceful settlement of their dispute with Canadian railways was announced today by western officials of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees and other Transport Workers (A.F.L.).

T. McGregor, general chairman, said 13,000 strike ballots were distributed to western members of the union. Of 10,500 returned 94 per cent endorsed strike action.

The union's strike vote was taken after it rejected the recommendations of a conciliation board. The union asked a 10-cent-an-hour wage increase, a 40-hour work week with the same take-home pay, and check-off of union dues.

Similar demands were made by railway shop workers represented by 13 international organizations and by the Brotherhood of Express Employees (C.C.L.). These unions are also taking strike votes.

Pre-Race News Items Found Entirely Legal

WASHINGTON (AP)—A Senate report today put the finger on the Continental Press service of Cleveland as the major source of racing news used illegally by the bookmakers of the United States.

The report said the communications companies, the press services and the country's daily newspapers also are sources of help for the bet-takers.

But it emphasized that the gathering, transmission and publication of racing data are a wholly legal business.

The report was drafted by the Senate commerce committee in urging the Senate to approve a bill which would place a ban on certain pre-race news moved across state lines from horse and dog tracks. The report said:

"The facts support the thesis that Continental today has a near monopoly in the transmission of racing news which ultimately reaches the bookmakers in the country."

Discussing race news distribution, the report said:

"It is obvious that so long as press associations and racing publications may continue to transmit racing information, and daily newspapers and specialized racing papers to publish it, the necessary information with which a bookmaker can operate would remain available.

"It is equally obvious from the testimony that there is a commingling and intermingling of interests and problems between such divergent and different operations as Continental and the press associations; Continental and the telegraph and telephone carriers; the press associations and the racing publications."

In what he called the order of their importance to bookies, the committee ranked the following:

(1) Continental Press service; (2) Western Union Telegraph company; (3) American Telephone and Telegraph Company; (4) Triangle publications (which publishes the daily Racing Form and the Morning Telegraph in New York); (5) The Associated Press, the United Press and International News Service; (6) Transradio Press.

Stowaway Cannot Prove Birthplace, Ordered To Leave

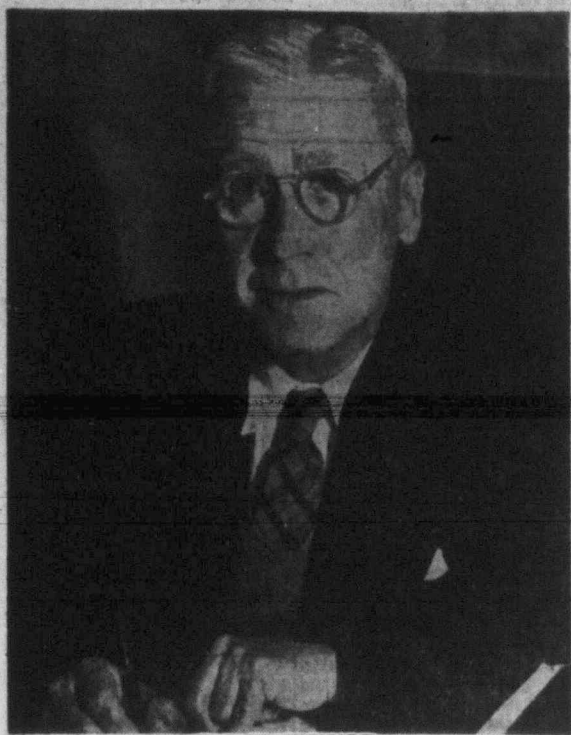

QUEBEC (CP)—Anthony Norton, young stowaway who made a hit with passengers during his free passage on the liner Empress of Scotland from Liverpool to Quebec, has been ordered deported, immigration officials said today.

The 23-year-old stowaway, claiming to be a Canadian of Polish descent and giving his home town as Canfield, Ont., was caught before the liner arrived here last week.

Norton has appealed against deportation and he is being held until immigration headquarters in Ottawa rules on the appeal.

N. C. Hebert, chief of the immigration office here, said Norton had failed to convince the board of inquiry that he is a Canadian.

Mr. Hebert said Norton will be returned to England unless Ottawa rules he may be admitted, or finds that he is a Canadian citizen.

Comptroller To Retire After 27 Years On Job

By AILEEN CAMPBELL

He began school at four years of age, golf at five, played every sport in the book in his youth and wrestled with higher mathematics, including two debt refunding schemes for Victoria, the better part of 40 years.

... And he'll be darned if he is going to sit back and just garden when he retires the end of July.

"The heck I will," he grinned. "I'd be bored to death. I've been too active all my life. Besides gardening is too much hard work."

That is Douglas A. Macdonald, Victoria's comptroller-treasurer talking and to those who know him, they will probably consider that the longest statement the lean, meat Scotsman has ever made about himself.

A top-flight city official who has served under six mayors and for 27 years guided the city's financial destiny under policy laid down by council, "D.A." has been noted for his tactfulness on city business where press and public are concerned.

PROTEST LETTERS

When called upon to give his advice to council, he gave it brief and straight-from-the-shoulder. Council was never left in any doubt about what "D.A." thought on any vital financial matter. He has written his share of "protest" letters to put his stand on record.

But as for the rumors and "inside info" that run rampant through any city hall corridor, he takes no part in them.

However on July 5 of this year he will be 65, official retirement age on superannuation and Friday afternoon was willing to reminisce a little about Edinburgh where he was born and George Heriot School where he received his secondary education.

"You know that school was built in 1629 and Cromwell used faithful employee were paid Mr. Baker by Mayor Percy George and Ald. Charles Banfield.

Former Police Chief On Hospital Board

Former Police Chief John A. McLellan has been appointed to the board of management of St. Joseph's Hospital. Appointment was announced by Sister Alice Marier, secretary of the board.

Charge Two With Sprinkling Offences

Two Saanich residents in Saanich police court this week pleaded not guilty to violation of the municipality's current sprinkling regulations. Charged were H. F. Aston, 285 Obed Avenue, and J. Huddleston, 243 Obed. They were remanded to June 15 for trial.

No Appeal For Police Sergeant

Because his appeal was not filed within the time limit, Sergeant Thomas Stevenson, city police officer, lost his chance of appealing a dangerous driving conviction to the Supreme Court.

Mr. Macdonald came to Saskatoon in 1913 as assistant bookkeeper with the city. He was internal auditor on leaving in 1920. That year he was admitted to the Institute of Chartered Accountants of Saskatchewan and left for Vancouver and an accountants' firm.

In 1923 he took the post of comptroller at Victoria and has held it since with treasurer tacked on in 1935.

He piloted negotiations for refunding of the city's debt at London in 1936 which gave Victoria a financial breather and also handled the second refunding scheme in 1945.

He has watched the city grow tremendously, the city hall staff itself nearly double and councils of another day, strive to make of Victoria an industrial centre, only to have their hopes dashed and the city left with the grain elevator and the worst mills for its trouble.

"My work has never been dull," he'll tell you but will not elaborate on the fat and lean years when mayors and aldermen of very diverse characters ran the city's business.

That is a closed book as far as Mr. Macdonald is concerned.

He will continue in his quiet, upstairs office with its wood-paneled walls until July 31. After that—a rest perhaps lots of golf and then some job. He may do a little gardening at his Harbinger Avenue home but it will definitely not be a full-time occupation.

R.C.A.F. Shows Off On Air Force Day

To Curtail Farmers' Aid On Poor Land

By GORDON E. LEIGHTON (Times Ottawa Correspondent)

OTTAWA—"Outstretched hand with palm upwards" depicts the western M.F. in the opinions of some of his eastern colleagues. Unfair, but it does reflect a growing irritation on the part of some of the central provinces' representatives when voting on measures of particular applicability to the west.

"Beneficence to the west" in their dictionary is that legislation which taxes them for payments to other provinces. P.F.A.A. and P.F.A.A. are prolific sources of annoyance to them as they are called on to vote the annual amounts. "It is not diminished by the tactics of some western members in fighting for additional or extended privileges, which, in the long run, affect only a minimum of farmers, mostly in a few constituencies."

CORRECT MISTAKES

Little solace is found in the intent of the P.F.A.A. recently under detailed discussion. Agriculture Minister Gardiner explains that it arises from the failure of the government to exercise its primary responsibility to settlers in past years. It did not ensure they were settled on suitable lands. Now, the country as a whole must repair this dereliction of duty. Settlers are being removed from sub-marginal lands as fast as opportunities offer and placed on fertile farms. But this is a process of time and the farmers must be aided in the interim.

Under P.F.A.A. farmers pay 1 per cent of their grain yields into a fund and withdraw from it if their crops fail to reach a subsistence level. Assurance of this assistance has tempted some farmers to encroach on unsuitable lands unaided. If not aided, by governments, The Dominion this year has determined to stop poaching for fear the benefit payments would grow so large as to kill the fund entirely.

As a measure of prevention the proposal to refuse benefits to any land leased or sold by governments to farmers after Dec. 31, 1950, has been introduced. It has passed the agricultural committee and will be accepted by the House. The new squatter who hopes to gain his subsistence by growing a meagre crop of grain and to eke it out with P.F.A.A. benefits will be outlawed as a beneficiary.

More Than 700 Nanaimo Folk Turn Out To Honor Their Lawmaker For 22 Years

NANAIMO—George S. Pearson's hometown folks turned out more than 700 strong Friday night to honor him for his 22 years as their representative in the B.C. Legislature.

The Pygmy Pavilion here was filled to capacity for the ceremony. Taking part were Premier Byron Johnson, Education Minister W. T. Straith, Health Minister Douglas Turnbull and Labor Minister John Cates.

Premier Johnson called Mr. Pearson the man who had done the most for people unable to care for themselves. The Premier listed many of the outstanding contributions made to the welfare of B.C. citizens by Mr. Pearson during his 17 years as a cabinet minister.

Apparently frail of body as he walked to the platform, it quickly developed neither his mind nor voice had been impaired by his illness which caused his retirement from the provincial cabinet.

PRESENTED GIFTS

Mr. Pearson was presented with gifts by Premier Johnson on behalf of the B.C. Liberal Association, and by Pete Maffeo on behalf of the Nanaimo and Island Liberal Association.

In a robust, virile resonant voice Mr. Pearson spoke for 20 minutes in returning thanks for the numerous tributes lauding his 22 years' service to the province.

NO APOLOGIES

After referring to hospital insurance, Mr. Pearson said he had no apologies to make. He said he had made mistakes. There were almost bound to have been errors made but he questioned whether anyone else could have brought in hospital insurance without making mistakes.

We are quite aware that Mr. MacDonald's personality and his efforts to please have had their effect in making MacDonald's one of Canada's foremost General Electric dealers."

Reds May Claim Lands In Antarctica

Diplomats Say New Note To U.S. May Mean Move For Big Area

WASHINGTON (UP)—Diplomats speculated today that the Soviet Union is preparing to lay formal claim to a large part of the Antarctic continent.

This speculation came when U.S. officials said they were "mystified" at a new Soviet diplomatic move, in which Moscow warned the world that it would recognize no international settlement of Antarctic claims to which it was not a party.

On the surface, the Russian move—which came in a note delivered here Friday—appeared to be a belated reference to an unsuccessful American diplomatic venture into the Antarctic picture two years ago.

At the time, the United States suggested to the seven nations with claims in the Antarctic that some form of internationalization of the south polar continent be worked out.

The American suggestion, which in effect was rejected, was designed to resolve the conflicting claims of Britain, Argentina and Chile to certain Antarctic territory.

The Soviet attitude is like that of the United States in some respects. The State Department has said repeatedly that this country makes no claim to Antarctic land, and does not recognize the claims of other nations.

THOROUGH WORK

But some U.S. explorations in the Antarctic have been so thorough that many diplomats acknowledge the United States legitimately could lay claim to large sections of it. The United States also has indicated very clearly that it expects to be a party to any future settlement of the controversy.

St. Laurent Right In Job Predictions

By GORDON E. LEIGHTON
Times Ottawa Correspondent

OTTAWA—Hard core is perhaps the best description of that percentage of Canada's working population which is always unemployed. Not always the same people but the same relative number to the total working force, between 3 per cent and 6 per cent.

Though this cannot be reduced, for various causes, the sometimes large remaining balance can be and, at present, is declining. Officials of the government, including some ministers, who pinned their faith on a rapid reduction of these registered as unemployed on the arrival of spring and summer, are able to redeem it.

Only, however, after some tremulous moments as the numbers climbed with startling speed in the early months of the year. There were over 400,000. The arrival of seasonal weather enabling open air activities to be resumed, marked by reductions of unemployment at the rate of 40,000 per week. This turned away both sharp criticism and trembling fear.

15,000 Chickens Destroyed By Fire
NEW WESTMINSTER (BUP)—Fifteen thousand chickens were killed in a fire in Surrey, near New Westminster, this morning which caused $50,000 damage.

South Westminster fire chief J. L. Cook who handled the blaze, said the fire broke out at 4:20 a.m. in the west end of the large Boliver Hatcheries. "There were about 15,000 chickens killed and the damage would run as high as $50,000 I imagine," Chief Cook said.

Several thousand other chickens were saved by the firemen. Cause of the blaze is unknown.

Proud Of Souvenirs

George Eagle proudly displays the souvenir box of chocolate bars he received from Queen Victoria on New Year's Day, 1900. He wears the three "real" medals he won for his Boer War and Indian campaigns.

Queen's Chocolate Bars Kept Intact 50 Years

By BOB HUTCHISON

When the 1st King's Royal Rifles received boxes of chocolate bars on New Year's day, 1900, as presents from Queen Victoria to Boer War soldiers, most of the men had theirs eaten before nightfall.

But not Private George Eagle.

He thought he'd keep his present from the Queen to show his grandchildren. That's just what he did.

Today, 50 years later, Joe Eagle the bugler as he was known "among the boys," has the box, the chocolate bars and four grandchildren.

He has more than a box of chocolates from Queen Victoria to show his grandchildren too. "Take a look at these," said Bugler Joe, bringing out three medals he had won for his services, one with six bars.

"They're real medals too—not like those they turn out now. The medals today are just fancy silver dollars," the Boer veteran said scornfully.

His medals are silver and almost a quarter of an inch thick. "Look here along the edge, they got my name and the year I won 'em."

He had shined his three prize possessions specially, because he knew photographer Bill Halkett and I were coming to visit him.

STILL PACKED

The small metal box, with the chocolate bars still neatly packed has a picture of the Queen clearly painted on it, and the year 1900. The chocolate appears to be in good condition still.

The box is full and the candy has never been touched. In fact when the photographer asked Mr. Eagle to take a piece out and pretend to bite it, he flatly refused. "No sir!" was his emphatic reply.

Mr. Eagle, 77, was born in London on November 10, 1872. He has lived in Canada since 1913 and been a resident of this city for the past 14 years.

Sandbag Dikes At Ft. Frances As Lake Rises

FORT FRANCES, Ont. (BUP)—Sandbag dikes were thrown up around homes on the shore of flooding Rainy Lake today as flood damage in the area reached an estimated $1,000,000.

The lake was less than two-tenths of a foot from reaching an all-time record flood level here after a rise of three-quarters of an inch yesterday. It had climbed 5.3 feet since May 6 and was 4.5 feet above flood stage.

Extensive damage was reported in Point Park, three miles from here, but private property was suffering most. Lawns and trees were washed away along the lakeshore.

"If we get an east storm, we'll all be wiped out—property and homes," one veteran lakesider said as he helped pile sandbags. This city and the town of International Falls, across the border in Minnesota, were in no danger.

The fishing industry on the lake was ruined, said officials. Earlier, commercial fishermen on the east side of the lake had estimated their losses at $200,000.

Other lakes in the area also were on the rampage.

Nfld. Village Safe As Blaze Turned Away

LEWISPORTE, Nfld. (BUP)—A raging forest fire which threatened to explode 2,000,000 gallons of stored gasoline veered away from Lewisporte in northern Newfoundland today as fire fighters drove the flames back to a point four miles from Lewisporte.

All available volunteers from the village of 1,600 were thrown into the battle to stem the flames, which Friday night appeared in danger of reaching the village and igniting the tank-stored gasoline.

Deputy Minister of National Resources Frederick Rowe said there was now no "immediate danger" to the village and 10 other settlements threatened by the forest fires.

The only other serious fire now raging in the province, Rowe said, was near Grand Falls, where a blaze burned close to the Anglo-Newfoundland corporation's property.

Despite Rowe's assurance the blaze at Lewisporte had been stemmed, however, all possible precautions were being taken in case the fire should be fanned by a wind change in the direction of Lewisporte.

Planes and ships had sped here with emergency fire-fighting supplies under orders to stand by for possible mass evacuation.

All women, children and elderly persons were told to pack and be ready to leave at a moment's notice. Every able-bodied man in the area joined forest rangers and woodsmen in fire-fighting duty.

At St. John's, Newfoundland's provincial capital, Deputy Welfare Minister Frederick Rowe said his department was preparing to send food here if evacuation to other coastal points became necessary.

The fire raged to within two and a half miles of the fuel tanks Friday night before a gusty wind that reached 25 to 30 miles an hour slackened. Early today the Dominion Public Weather Office clocked winds at 15 miles an hour.

Fire-fighters' work was hampered by lack of equipment. Additional men and lengths of hose were rushed here in railway flatcars from the Gander air base 35 miles away. Smoke covered the field with a heavy pall.

ANY OTHERS?

Mr. Eagle would like to know if there is anyone else who still has a box of "Victoria chocolates." He thinks he is probably the only person in the world today who has the souvenir.

"During the war I was in Pretoria twice, once for the annexation of the Free State and Transvaal. The other time we were derailed by the Boers, but we got there all right. I was sent home, after my time had expired. In 1901, they gave me the South African medal and six bars for that campaign. We had to march back over hundreds of miles of veldt."

Constructive Negotiation?

WHEN SECRETARY-GENERAL Trygve Lie of the United Nations returned from his European visit less than two weeks ago he announced that "I return . . . with the belief that the possibility of constructive negotiation exists." It was his hope that a meeting of representatives from East and West could be called to reach agreement on a settlement of the cold war. He felt there were possibilities of success in such a conference, and large possibilities of danger if a termination of the cold war could not be arranged. Presumably that feeling and that danger still exist, but Mr. Lie has been forced to admit that prospects of holding the proposed meeting are fading.

The very able executive of the United Nations built his hopes on "hints" which he says he received in talks with leaders in the Big Four capitals last month. But the stumbling block of Chinese representation in the U.N. still exists to hamper possibilities of further East-West agreement. Russia has walked out on U.N. meetings in protest against the continued seating of Chiang Kai-shek's emissaries. It is claimed that the Communist regime of China, being in the possibility of constructive negotiation, should replace the spokesmen of the fallen Nationalist administration, and it is a claim that carries considerable practical weight. The United Nations cannot condone the seizure of control of a country by force of arms, but once that event has taken place the question must be raised as to whether it is advisable to hold up further progress in other fields by refusing to acknowledge the fait accompli. It is statesmanship under the bludgeon, but apparently unavoidable.

That is the dilemma that now faces the United Nations and threatens that global body with irreparable harm. The impasse is such that Mr. Lie sees no purpose in bringing the Big Four leaders together before the next meeting of the General Assembly, as earlier he indicated he hoped to do. The fresh disappointment is tempered by the fact that many observers saw little prospect of success in such an approach to Russia. Too many international conferences in the past have been stalemated by Soviet refusal to compromise in the slightest degree. When agreement has ostensibly been reached, later objections from the Kremlin have negated the diplomatic work of weeks or months. A large part of the world's population has come to look on consultation with Russia as a waste of time unless a policy of abject surrender to all Soviet demands is followed. Mr. Lie's belief in "the possibility of constructive negotiation" may still exist—and, indeed, repudiation of it would present a sorry alternative—but it would seem that some time must elapse yet before such a process may be entered upon with any hope of success.

Rights And Responsibilities

AS A MEANS OF EMPHASIZING THE responsibilities that go with the rights of citizenship, the Dominion Government's proposal to extend the franchise to reservation Indians who forego tax exemption on their reservation earnings has its points. The scheme would furnish some opportunity to a section of our people to take a more satisfactory position in our national life. By renouncing their statutory right to avoid taxation on reservation income, they would, moreover, be showing their appreciation of the privileges their elevation to fuller citizenship entailed.

No person in Canada enjoys full citizenship without paying for it. Taxation is as clear an indication of that payment as any other. Beyond the narrower criticism of specific administrations—criticism which arises from party interest—we in this Dominion operate on the principle that the government is the people through their representatives. Government can only do the public service work it has to do through the money the people provide.

Considered against that background, the reservation Indian holds an unusual position in the national scene. On his reserve—a small part of the country in comparison with the dominion he once exercised over half a continent—he has special concessions. If he is to be considered a member of a race apart from Canada and Canadians, the special privileges he is allowed, in contradistinction to those of others in this country, can be easily justified. If, on the other hand, he is to be considered a fully-fledged Canadian with the rights others enjoy, those concessions become an instrument of paternalism of highly doubtful merit.

It seems reasonable that those who want to earn a greater measure of citizenship should be given the chance to do so. What they stand to lose in protection of their monetary earnings on the reservation, should be compensated by the extension to them of the franchise.

It Was Ever Thus

FROM TIME TO TIME NON-PROFESSORIAL members of the House of Commons at Ottawa and members of the various provincial Legislatures take a sly shot at the legal fraternity because the laity finds it somewhat difficult to make head or tail of the phraseology with which the laws of the land are adorned. The average individual, accustomed as he is now to a much faster pace of living than were his ancestors, is wont to argue that simpler language might be employed by the honored and learned profession—if only to save time. But this is no new complaint. A leading article in the issue of The Times of London for June 4, 1850, for instance, was headed: "Need laws be unintelligible?"

The article in question begins by setting out the following premise: "The confusion and uncertainty which our present system of legislation has produced in the law excite alarm and almost despair in the minds of all who can bring themselves to think upon the matter." In blunter phrase it proceeds:

"... Acts to amend acts that were passed to amend previous amendments figure in every such catalogue (of orders of the day), till at length the mind, bewildered by the blundering attempts to improve, becomes content to bear present, known, and appreciable evils rather than run the risk of attempting to cure them. After many years of uninterrupted experience of this increasing evil, the question is fairly forced upon us—is it inevitable—is it inherent in the nature of things—does it result from our want of care and forethought—or is it a grievous necessity to which we must patiently submit?"

The Times' editorial was dealing with the Savings Bank Bill of 100 years ago, legislation to enact certain obvious principles; but "repealing and amending clauses had reduced the whole subject to inextricable confusion," which prompted the old "Thunderer" to intimate to the powers that be that legislation on legal subjects was such that no wisdom could decide the issues "unless informed by the spirit of prophecy." So the newspaper came to the conclusion that "... there is no man or men appointed by Parliament who are conversant with the mere mechanical process of framing laws. This function, which the egotism and vanity of Parliamentary leaders would reduce to a subordinate position, is of first-rate importance. It requires for its full and adequate performance great knowledge, great mastery of language, accurate and precise conception of the objects desired, and the skill to express those objects in unambiguous phrases."

In other words, those who complain of ambiguous phrases in the laws of the land in this year of grace 1950 may take some consolation from the fact that the process of drafting amendments to amend earlier amendments is as old as the hills—at least as far back as a century ago in the Mother of Parliaments.

Totalitarianism Follows Tactic Of Corrupting Minds Of Youth

By BRUCE BLOSSAT From New York

THE western powers rightly insist their firm show of strength in Berlin turned the well-advertised Whitsuntide rally of German Communist youth into a propaganda fiasco.

Being realistic, Moscow could never have believed that such an assembly of blue-shirted youngsters could successfully storm the Allied-held sectors of the city against determined opposition. The Russians must have understood from the start, too, that the West would not sit idly by while Red youths overran the German metropolis.

UNCOMFORTABLE POSITION

Perhaps they thought for a time that a mass drive on the western areas would put the Allies in the uncomfortable position—before Germany and the world—of shooting down German youth in the Berlin street.

It became apparent, however, that the United States, Britain and France intended to repel any junior "invasion" of their sectors by every means short of bloodshed. Not that blood might not have flowed had the move come off. But the prospect was that thousands upon thousands of youngsters would have been driven back by nothing more dramatic than powerful streams of water from fire hoses.

Undignified retreat before such "weapons" could not have been twisted easily into a Communist triumph, moral or otherwise. Since a propaganda advantage was the real Russian goal of this manoeuvre, what was left but to call off the push into West Berlin?

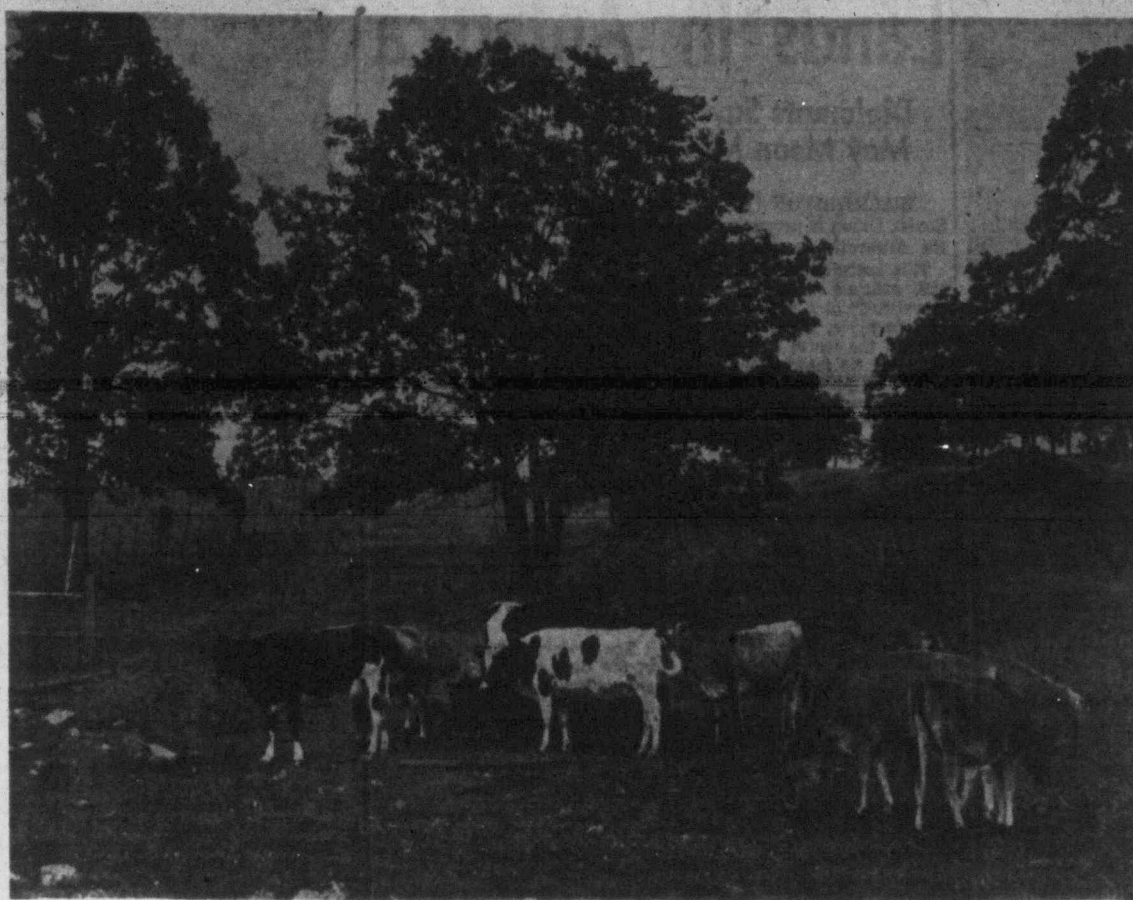

Yet no one watching or hearing of the Whitsuntide youth carnival could avoid dismal parallels with the past. First there were the Kaiser's legions, then the Nazis' brownshirts. Now the marchers wear blue and have different songs and slogans.

But in their dutiful tramp down Unter den Linden, in the great placards and fluttering banners one senses the same dedicated subservience to a leader and a cause.

WARPED MINDS

Once again the world is witnessing the corruption of youth to the aims of dictators bent on global conquest. At Whitsuntide these Red youngsters of East Germany could only jeer at the guns of the western nations. They will grow to manhood in a warped frame of mind which will perhaps make them eager to challenge those guns with their own metal.

The Allies have triumphed in a propaganda skirmish. But the big battle for the minds of troubled peoples everywhere—and especially the young minds—goes much harder.

Kenya Problem

By PATRICK O'DONOVAN from Machakos, Kenya

THE DUST rose in a red cloud to the tops of the trees. Two thousand head of cattle stood outside the circle of thorn hedge and bellowed passionately for water. Small naked boys with bows and arrows in their hands slipped like lizards between the beasts and let a few at a time through a trampled lane towards a bare hole. For miles around, cattle paths led through the African bush to this one place and the dry earth was stripped of grass and weed. Only the ugly, dust-grey trees stood above the desolation and the drought.

This squalid thing set in a pointless plain 200 miles from Nairobi in Kenya means more than a new bridge to London. I was taken to see it as if it were the achievement of a high culture, something to wonder at, which, of course, it is. For progress in a colony is marked by such monuments.

THIS is the district set aside for the Ukamba tribe in central Kenya. For the last 18 months they have been having something like a famine. They also had famines in 1941, '44 and '46. They are likely to have another whenever the rains fall a little below their best.

There are half a million Ukamba in Kenya. They are fiercely handsome when they are young and pleasant, courteous people to meet. They have never done anything of any importance or left so much as a notch on history. The missionaries have taught them to carve wood a little. They used to fight frequently, to live a semi-nomadic and wholly savage life, moving on when the cattle had finished the green stuff. But since the British came, 40 years ago, they have doubled their numbers and there is now no unclaimed land to quench their hunger.

MOST of them are administered from this little township of Machakos. It is only a street of mean shops, a sandy road and a few administrative buildings standing on grass under flowering trees.

But all around are the hills of the Ukamba. In their way they are as terrible to see as a national disaster. For within memory, the women of the tribe, who do the work, have tilled the steep slopes and loosened the earth, sheep and goats the size of dogs have torn up the grass and weed, the annual rains have swept away all that is good for the soil and only the bare skeletons of the hills remain—naked, ugly, dry and almost useless. And this is the land where the Ukamba must live.

THE SOLUTION to their trouble is good farming but the Ukamba must be among the worst farmers in the world. Faced with the same problem the Chinese and Javanese have covered their hills and valleys with a close network of stone-walled terraces and every fragment of earth looks as if it had been run lovingly through a man's hand. Terracing would save the Ukamba, but that entails too much work.

They do not blame themselves for what is happening. They blame the British because they can no longer simply move on. The elders who sit in the shade of trees and talk the sun out of the sky can remember a time when the land beyond the hills was looked on as theirs. They never needed it because it was not necessary; now European farms have taken it over and, on the same sort of ground, are wet and green and flourishing while theirs are brown and covered with dust.

THE UKAMBA have 5,000 square miles of Kenya. Much of it is waterless and needs the sort of love and skill the Jews have given to the deserts of Israel to make it habitable. The Ukamba could live on their land—if they were other than what they are.

NORTHERN ISLAND

Is there any reason why the Doukhobors could not be sent to an island up north? There would not be much danger of their removing their clothes or burning down their igloo houses and it seems to me it would be a simple way of solving the problem without inconveniencing or annoying decent-living people and giving the country a bad reputation.

DAILY READER.

STRIKE HARDSHIPS

According to recent news items, the I.W.A., and now carpenters, appear unwilling to co-operate or negotiate. Is not this shortsightedness going to work the greatest hardship on labor itself?

Nearly everyone knows one or more families who would like to build a house, or make an alteration to the one they already have, but on account of the already prohibitive cost of labor, lumber and, in fact, everything that goes into building a home, people are forced to lay aside their plans in the hopes that costs will come down. Who then is suffering the most from this delay? Is it not labor, at large?

To prove that strikes do not pay, I quote from the New York Times of Dec. 18, 1949: "Over the past 10 months the nation's 400,000 coal miners have lost as much as four months' work—at least $1,200 each in pay. The reason has been a series of partial and total work stoppages ordered by John L. Lewis." This was back in December. The strike continued for many weeks more. What then must the total loss have been to the miners? Also is it not a well-known fact that money lost during strikes is never made up from increased wages? Therefore, labor loses out all around and while I, too, am a worker I am of the opinion that in the long run, we shall gain more now if we "stick to our guns" and thus enable industry to remain stable.

PEACE—AT WHAT PRICE?

Those who remember Prime Minister Chamberlain's missions to Munich and the world-shaking repercussions which followed his "peace in our time" proclamation should be able to see the hidden hand and the awful results of the now-so active world peace movement supported by "noted men of science, authors and artists as well as by millions of men and women," and Mr. or Mrs. Peace. The public utterances of the Red Dean, Dr. Endicott and their ilk call for plain rebuttal, so let us call a spade a spade and recognize this great movement for what it is—the Hitler technique in a new guise, the genuine sleep-producing opiate, but a far more subtle and sinister deception.

Let us not be fooled by these "angels of light" in clerical clothing. These two mountebanks having taken most solemn vows and dedicated themselves to the advancement of Christ's Kingdom have repudiated their pious pledges but, still under the cloak of religion, are serving the powers of an anti-God, anti-Christ regime in their preachments of peace and "religion is the opiate of the people." Educated and courageous? Yes, but how terribly perverted! Compared to these apostates the Vicar of Bray was a poor pig indeed. With insolent audacity they extol this heathen philosophy and its gods, meanwhile bestowing a vigorous backhand swipe at the Christian faith, and smear its people. Such calumny of the Politburo and Russia anywhere behind the Iron curtain would not permit them five minutes of life, but just why should they be permitted to strut about Canada and preach their poisonous propaganda is beyond a joke and comprehension.

I heartily agree that apologies are in order. In the first place from the government in allowing such enemies of British freedom to sow the seed of revolution in the land that gives them everything they enjoy, and brazenly insult its government and people. I believe this sort of talk could be construed as sedition or treason in a court of law. Secondly, from these apostles of the Kremlin, and Tim Buck, too, for maligning loyal Britishers and Americans everywhere. To think that we were Russia's late comrades-in-arms and sacrificed untold treasure and lives to our own hurt in her behalf to win the war! The nerve of it! Now no opprobrium is too vile; we are even called "evil men." How long, I ask, must we suffer such vitriolic pabulum to poison our minds and sully our journals?

"Peace—at what price?" is the question today. I reply, if on Stalin's terms a bondage as hard and grinding as that of the Israelites in Egypt. What else can one expect of a power whose open boast is world domination? That verdict should be patent to anyone.

Congratulations, Mr. Editor, for your forthright editorials and presenting both sides of a question. More power to your exposes of the fifth column in our midst.

THE EXCHANGE REPLIES

With reference to your editorial in Thursday's paper, June 8, in which you attempt to justify the action of the mayor and aldermen in calling for new tenders for the erection of the proposed firehall in James Bay.

We wish to point out that the objections raised by the Victoria Building Industries Exchange were not against the opening of tenders in public—we are and have always been in favor of this procedure. This method is a necessary protection to the public as well as to the contractors tendering.

Our objection in this particular instance was against their action of calling for new tenders when only minor changes were to be made.

It is our firm belief that the ethical procedure in such a circumstance would naturally be for the council to instruct their architect to negotiate the value of these minor changes with the successful bidder, who would adjust his tender accordingly. This is standard practice, should alterations be found necessary after the contract is awarded for either extras or allowances.

We agree with the council, should new plans and specifications be necessary, that it would be in order to advertise for new tenders.

What we were afraid would occur has happened. One of the higher tenders reduced his bid by $2,200, whereas the value of the deductions according to the changes required were less than $1,000.

This second calling of tenders deprived the lowest tenderer on the first call of the job, and gave it to one of the highest original tenderers at a saving of only $69 to the taxpayers.

We, too, are tax and license payers in the city of Victoria and are just as interested as the council is in saving all they can of the taxpayers' money. We do not believe, however, that the small saving justifies the action of the council in these circumstances.

We believe the Victoria taxpayer wants the city's business carried on by the mayor and aldermen in the same manner as he would his own in an ethical and fair-minded manner that will retain the confidence of those with whom they find it necessary to do business. In spite of the censure of city officials with reference to letters from this organization, in regard to city business, we will always criticize when we feel that criticism is justified.

ROY T. LOUGHEED.

Secretary, Victoria Building Industries Exchange.

In the post office of a North Carolina village a stranger saw the local patriarch sitting on a flour barrel and whistling. A bystander informed him that the old fellow had already passed his 100th birthday. Impressed, the stranger exclaimed: "Isn't that amazing?"

"We don't see nothin' amazin' 'bout it 'round here," was the laconic reply. "All he's done is grown old—and he's took longer than most people would to do that!"

NOT PULLING ITS WEIGHT

Globe and Mail

It is shocking that Canada, especially with its recognized need for a much greater population, should still have to be reminded of its responsibilities, as well as its opportunities, in solving the refugee problem of Europe. Such a reminder has been very sharply and pointedly given all Western nations by the International Refugee Organization.

That body, to which Canada belongs, fears that a major political catastrophe lies in the Western nations' neglect of refugees who have fled from satellite countries behind the Iron Curtain. Added to the still vast residue of those whom the war made homeless is a constant flow of newcomers.

BIG FUTURE

Exchange

Manufacturers of clothing, furniture and sleeping-car berths have been advised to plan future production of goods and accommodation for taller and heavier persons than the present generation. An American professor of public health who has made a study of comparative data over 30 years of the height and weight of university freshmen reports their average height increased 274 inches and their weight 224 pounds. He believes the rising curve will continue for some time, if conditions causing the improvement would continue. The conditions are: Higher standard of living; increased application of the science of nutrition, housing and public health, and the abolition of child labor in factories and on farms.

ELDERLY PATIENTS

The Times of London

With unfortunate frequency the public is shocked to hear of an old man or woman being found dead at home after vain attempts to secure admission to hospital. It is not so commonly appreciated that the inability or reluctance of hospitals to admit such patients is partly caused by the large number of elderly patients already there who cannot be discharged because there is nowhere suitable for them to go. These patients, some of whom have been "dumped" by relatives who would have kept them at home if the hospitals charged for their services, are not merely blocking the way for other patients, old or young, urgently needing hospital treatment; they are being cared for in institutions of the most expensive kind, when simpler and less costly provision could be made for their needs. This situation is not to be relieved merely by building more hospitals and employing more nurses.

Ups And Downs

By BRIAN A. TOBIN

"HABIT," said the Elevator Man, "can get you in wrong. Even habits that once seemed to be good. You may have trained yourself, for instance, to have just before you put your shoes on in the morning. But if something disturbs the regular program—a phone call or someone at the door, say—you may get your shoes laced without having shaved. And then you're in danger of finding yourself out on the street headed for work with a bristly chin, because there was nothing to get you back on the track of habit again. Take that poor fellow in Leipzig. He was the chief of the local fire brigade. For years he'd practised giving the Hitler salute when the Fuehrer was in power. The other day the old habit proved too much for him. At a festival he gave the salute without thinking—and found himself out of a job. Going down!"

"It would be surprising," said the Elevator Man, "to know how much of our lives is governed by mere habit. Many people get as far as their office desks or factory benches every day entirely on the automatic reflex of their muscles. They don't have to think a single thought—just go through the motions they did the day before and the day before that. Maybe some of us live our whole lives that way, just coming up to the surface of consciousness now and then for a look round. Mezzanine!"

"How many people," said the Elevator Man, "keep dating letters 1949 long after it's 1950? How many wait at bus stops they know have been changed? How many call girls by their maiden names long after they've been married? How many wear overcoats well on into summer just because they've got used to them? We all benefit from our habits, but we all suffer from them, too. For success it's necessary to change our habits to meet changing conditions. In fact we should make a habit of it."

Claxton Declares Forces Adequate

But Drew Voices Alarm Over Size Of Canada's Defence Army

OTTAWA (CP)—George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, told the Commons Friday that every Canadian should be alarmed at the smallness of the army Canada has available to meet a sudden attack.

In a verbal battle with Defence Minister Claxton over the state of preparedness of Canadian forces, Mr. Drew said only 4,000 of the 20,000-odd men in Canada's regular army are in the airborne brigade group that is its striking force. Every Canadian should be alarmed over this "serious disproportion."

Mr. Claxton said that in the opinion of his advisers the Canadian forces and those planned by the United States for Alaska would be sufficient to deal with an attack on the northwest part of the continent on the scale that might be anticipated as part of a total war.

In any attack from the north-east the U.S. had forces in Newfoundland that would be available and Canada had reserve units which "are in very good condition indeed."

Soap Box Derby Finals Described

A discussion of racing cars that operate at practically no expense was given members of the Victoria Optimist Club Thursday by Fred Wilkinson, assistant service manager at Wilson Motors.

Description of the local derby which is held on Labor Day week-end was given by the speaker. He explained the regulations every young aspirant must adhere to in order to qualify.

Mr. Wilkinson also described the British Columbia finals meet which he witnessed at Mission last week. The boy who won the meet will make a trip to Akron, Ohio, to compete in the national derby held in midsummer.

After the talk films were shown of last year's event at Akron.

THE HOME GARDEN

Fertilizer In Liquid Form Needed By Plants

By JACK G. BEASTALL

The mere fact of adding a chemical fertilizer to the soil is no assurance that the crop will benefit.

Plants can starve with fertilizer all around them if it is not available in a form which they can use.

The point for the home gardener to remember is that the fine feeding roots can only absorb liquids, they cannot pick up solids. Therefore the fertilizer has to be in a liquid form before the plants can use it.

Under normal conditions of sufficient soil moisture this is accomplished, but the incorporating of chemicals into a dry soil can do a lot of damage. Should the elements come in contact with the roots they are burned instead of fed.

'WATER IN THOROUGHLY'

This is the reason why we are warned not to apply chemicals unless the soil is evenly moist, and to "water in thoroughly."

During the growing season, which is also our dry season, we can save quite a bit of fertilizer by applying the side dressings in liquid form.

Fortunately, the salts of ordinary chemical fertilizers are readily soluble in water, and most of the standard texts advise the amount of dry material to use in a gallon solution and the length of row this should cover.

Chimney soot, excluding oil soot, is an excellent tonic for both garden and house plants. The stock solution is usually diluted until it has the color of weak tea.

PROTECTS ONIONS
Soot in the dry form is an old-time favorite for the onion bed, even to dusting it over the plants to keep the onion fly from laying its eggs.

Lime, which regularly listed under fertilizers, is not actually a plant food. It is a soil conditioner, having the property of binding loose, sandy soils so they give better retain moisture and food, and loosening stiff clays in a manner which releases food to the crops.

Pageant Planned For Citizens' Day In Victoria

To commemorate passage of the Canadian Citizenship Act by Parliament just over three years ago, Sunday will be observed in Victoria as Canadian Citizenship Day.

The day will be celebrated with a colorful ceremony at Beacon Hill Park starting at 2:30 in the afternoon. Mayor Percy E. George will officiate. Mrs. G. M. Gardiner is convenor.

The program has been organized by the Local Council of Women with the aid of the Women's Canadian Club, the Canadian Daughters' League and the Native Sons of Canada.

William Ireland, provincial archivist and librarian, will address the audience on "Being a Canadian."

A pageant of about 20 children, under the direction of Arthur Veale, will also depict life in Canada's 10 provinces. I.O.D.E. standard bearers as well as new Canadians attired in their national costumes, will also participate in the program.

Rotarians Told Russian People Not To Be Feared

"We hear a lot today about people being afraid of the Russians," I don't think we need to fear the Russian people—their leaders maybe—but not the ordinary man on the street," Rev. James Albertson of Port Angeles told the Rotary Club luncheon Thursday at the Empress.

"Basically, all people have the same desires, ambitions and yearnings," he said. "The Russians are just like us."

He told the club achievement in anything meant work. "As long as there are people on the earth willing to work there is a chance to gain this 'brave new world' that people talk about."

Rev. Albertson came to Victoria with a large group of Port Angeles Rotarians and their wives for an inter-city visit. Club president Keith Thompson headed the party.

HOLLYWOOD REVIEW

Surprises Come As Movie Star's Subconscious Probed

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Imagine interviewing a movie star's subconscious mind.

That's the notion I toyed with this week after talking to a cautious actress who had nothing to say but glittering generalities. I took her remarks and tried to envision what she was really thinking about. This is the result:

"Hello! So nice to see you again. (Nice! Here I've got three pages of dialogue to learn and this egghead wants to ask me a lot of stupid questions.)"

SOME SCRIPT

"I've wanted to do this picture for a long time. It's the most exciting script I've read in years. (What script? Every time I go before the camera, they hand me 10 new pages. I haven't done piece work like this since I left the shoe factory.)"

"This picture is really a change of pace for me. (Change of pace? meaning I had to take a $10,000 cut in salary.) The woman I play is really an off-beat character. (So far off-beat that 10 other stars turned it down.)"

"And what an actor this leading man is! A real trouper. (If that lens-hog doesn't stop trying to steal my scenes I'll bite his lip in the clutches.)"

RUM-BUM

"I love working with this director. He has a sensitivity that is rare in Hollywood. (What? That rum-bum couldn't direct traffic.)"

"Yes, it's true—I'll be leaving the studio after this picture. It has been a long and successful association, but I think both of us need a change. I asked for my release. (Okay, so they didn't pick up my option.)"

VETERANS' SOCIAL

A floor show, featuring Fred Usher and his Hometowners, will be staged at the social meeting of the Britannia Branch, Canadian Legion, to be held on Thursday, June 15 at 8. Guest artists will include Pat Berry, vocalist and Al Smith, accompanist.

Workers' Pay During March Sets New Canadian Record

OTTAWA (CP)—Industrial workers in Canada carried home during March the heaviest average weekly pay envelopes in the history of the country, the Bureau of Statistics reported Friday.

The bureau, in a monthly survey of the industrial employment situation, also reported there was a slight improvement in the number of persons employed during the month.

At April 1, the average weekly earnings had reached an all-time high of $44.87, about 2.9 per cent higher than the average wages at March 1 and 3.5 per cent above the April 1 wage level last year.

The bureau, which did not give any actual employment figures, said the index number of employment at April 1 was 187.6, up one point from the March figure of 186.6 and unchanged from April 1, 1949. The index is based on 1926 employment equals 100.

Plane Beheads Girl in Pakistan

KARACHI, Pakistan (Reuter)—A low-flying aircraft Friday beheaded a 16-year-old girl and injured two of her companions as they played on the sands at Clinton Beach, a pleasure resort near here. Eye-witnesses said the aircraft circled overhead several times before hitting the school-girls.

Crosby Home-Bound

CHERBOURG, France (AP)—Bing Crosby sailed for the United States Friday on the liner Queen Elizabeth. The singer said he will visit Europe again next year. During his stay, Crosby visited France, Belgium and England and played in the British amateur golf championship at St. Andrews, Scotland, where he was defeated in the first round.

FINGERPRINTS DON'T LIE

THE STORY: Refusing to believe that fingerprint evidence is conclusive that her fiancé Paul Moody killed her father, Azalea Palmer has engaged private detective Martin Queripel to investigate the case. After Azalea tells her story to the detective, she makes a few careless comments on the police investigation which at once arouses Queripel's interest.

XVIII

When a weary twig of a tree released its fruit and let an apple thump to the ground at the feet of Sir Isaac Newton, it sent his mind along a path which led to the discovery of the law of gravity. It was thus that Azalea Palmer's next words gave the detective Martin Queripel what his French ancestors called "furiously to think."

Yet Azalea laughed more with scorn than humor when she said: "What's to prevent that fingerprint man from saying he made those fingerprints of mine on the telephone, and then accusing me of murdering my own father? It wouldn't be any more ridiculous than accusing Paul of it."

SHOUT RECALLED

The young lawyer, Harley Kenyon, looked at Queripel and smiled at Azalea's quaint notion; but Queripel's intense meditation changed to a look of startled wonder when Azalea added lightly: "Why, didn't that very fingerprint man, when he finished with us and was leaving the room—didn't he call out to somebody in the room where my father's body was lying—didn't the fingerprint man shout at somebody: 'Kelso, I told you to keep away from that telephone!'"

Queripel winced as if struck, and said: "You didn't tell me that before!"

"I never thought of it till just now when we were talking of that fingerprint man. Is it important?"

"It might be," said Queripel, not daring to tell her, hardly daring to imagine how important it might be.

To confuse the confusion—and it is out of confusion that order arises—Timothy O'Hea blundered in.

"Is it 'Kelso'—the man's name you're just after mentioning?"

"Kelso," she assented. "He was all over the place. He came in later and told Detective Fleming about how he'd found out that certain people had seen Paul go into the house, and force his way through the door in spite of my father's trying to keep him out. It was Kelso who was sent to arrest Paul. If you could have seen his ugly face light up when he got word to go arrest Paul at his studio! And Kelso took along the fingerprint man, who had sworn at him for touching that fatal telephone the murderer used to kill my father."

BLOW-UP COMING

O'Hea interposed. "That Kelso is as bad as they make 'em. When the big blow-up comes in the police department, he'll be one of the first and worst. He's one of the vice squad graduates. And he goes about with a woman as bad as he is—Nelda Croft, she calls herself."

At the mention of that name, Azalea flung up her head and seemed to be listening. And she was listening—to her memory. "Nelda Croft?" she thought aloud. "I remember hearing the name when my father was talking to the butler once. The butler said, 'You're wanted on the telephone, sir, by Miss—Miss Croft.' I was in another room but I couldn't help hearing my father say: 'Remember this. I'm never at home—never! when you get a call from that blackmailing—'"

When Queripel and Kenyon and O'Hea exchanged glances now, it was almost as if their eyes were billiard balls caroming off one another for an important shot.

They had no theories as yet, but dancing about in their brains were the glittering elements of which theory is made.

There was so long a silence that Azalea rose and said: "I've taken too much of your time. I'd better leave you a chance to use your brains. Could I ask what's the first thing you plan to do?"

Queripel answered for Kenyon: "I imagine that the first thing for your lawyer to do will be to get himself accepted and recorded as Paul Moody's lawyer. He'll have to see Paul, of course, and get his consent to our working for him."

"Tell him it was my wish, and the only thing that will make me happy. I couldn't be happy while he is in danger. Tell him it is the only thing that will save me from despair. Shall I write it?"

TO SEE COLLECTION

"If he won't take our word," said Queripel, "I'll ask you to do just that. But I think we can make him listen to reason. Once we have his permission, I think that, while Kenyon here is mapping out the legal steps he has to take, I'll go over and see that fingerprint man in the Crime Laboratory, and look into his collection. I'll ask him about this man Kelso. I still believe that fingerprints don't lie. But it's just possible that they might be misquoted."

Azalea put out her hand to Queripel across the desk and he clasped it in both of his. It was like steel in velvet. She gave her hand to Kenyon, and he barely saved himself from bending over to kiss it. When she put out her hand to O'Hea, he stared at it in surprise and handled it as if it were a little bird. He fell over his feet as he rushed to the door to open it for her.

Cordova Bay Hall Fund Gets $220

The sum of $220 has been added to the Cordova Bay Community Club's fund for erection of a new hall. Club members learned Wednesday night that amount was netted from a hoe-down in Saanichton Agricultural Hall.

The fund will be further swelled with proceeds from a dance at Saanichton June 23.

The Cordova Bay group appointed Cyril Price, chairman of the local improvements committee, to take up with the public Utilities Commission the matter of better bus service for the area.

Recording secretary Rev. W. H. Day submitted his resignation at Wednesday's meeting, and Dave Radford was named to take over the post. Mrs. Hilda Andrews will fill Mr. Radford's former job as corresponding secretary. Rev. Day resigned because of ill health.

Amputate Leg Caught In Gears

VANCOUVER (CP)—A doctor severed the crushed leg of a diesel mechanic Friday to free the agonized man from the gears of his machine.

Angus MacCauley, 26, was then rushed to hospital.

He lay in helpless pain for nearly an hour after catching his left foot in the machinery of the excavating shovel he was cleaning.

There were no eyewitnesses.

Fined For Not Paying Insurance

Pleading guilty to charges of failing to pay hospital insurance premiums on the due date, two persons were fined $5 each in Oak Bay police court Friday afternoon by Magistrate H. C. Hall. They were H. Hunt, Hampshir Road, and David Beck, St. Patrick Street.

The court was told that both had paid the premium owing in the meantime. The alternative to the fines were three days in jail.

Faith In Yourself In Face Of Adversity Makes Real Champion

By FRANK S. MOHLEY

All baseball fans have been puzzled by the Boston Red Sox. On paper they have everything it takes to make a champion. They have good pitching, good fielding and an absolutely murderous team batting average, with one of the ablest managers in baseball. They should be leading the American League by half a dozen games.

The late Kiki Cuyler who was coaching the Red Sox a year ago at his finger right on the trouble. In last year's pennant race when asked whether his team could beat out the Yankees, he replied that he didn't believe they could. "Why?" Because, he answered, when the team was defeated the players got too depressed. They lost faith in themselves. Champions, he said, could take a licking and come back. They had to have faith in themselves.

MAD GREAT FAITH

Cuyler is absolutely right. I was in New York for a world series between the Yankees and the Giants back in 1936. The Yankees won that day by a terrific score and in the evening I was talking over the game with a team member. I expressed my surprise that the Giants were not more troublesome. The Yankee player looked at me and replied with absolute seriousness and supreme self-confidence, "You have to remember that we are probably the finest team in baseball history."

James Murray wrote an article for "Life" entitled, "If Hase the Yankees." He seems to think that the Yankees got to the top by means of money power. James, you are dead wrong! In the first place you can't buy good players today. Moreover, the Boston Red Sox have spent more money collecting a team than the Yankees. The Yankees have a good team, but it is the "Yankee spirit" that does the trick. Joe McCarthy must have forgotten what made his former team champions or he would trade at least one poor sport or give him to the Yankees. The potentially great Boston Sox just haven't the heart, the team spirit, or the spirit of sportsmanship.

This faith in yourself, this ability to come back after defeat, the stubborn refusal to allow your morale to be cracked by adversity, makes a champion.

I was in Edinburgh when Winston Churchill was speaking.

This was back in 1931 when Baldwin had an overwhelming party majority and in caucus Churchill was a minority of one. The crowd booed him so badly that I could not hear 10 words. Throughout the following years Churchill pleaded in vain for honest realism in politics. We were too far gone in sentimental hypocrisy.

Out in a political wilderness Churchill appeared to be absolutely broken and finished. He learned much about blood, sweat and tears. Yet he grew in adversity so that in the hour of greatest peril his nation called him back to become one of the most tremendous figures in world history.

Or I think of Roosevelt who in 1921 faced a brilliant future and in the midst of great activities and plans was stricken with infantile paralysis. Yet Frances Perkins relates that he underwent "a spiritual transformation" during his illness. She describes in "The Roosevelt I Knew" that when she met him afterward he was a crippled youth, but a man who now had a mission and a radiant self-assurance. He had also a fine humility of spirit as the years of pain and suffering had taken from him a former arrogance, and made him warm-hearted and understanding and, incredibly, without a trace of bitterness. He believed now in the power of Divine Providence over his life and he had an inner security which would maintain that for the nation as it had been for him "the only thing to fear is fear itself."

It is this faith in yourself—this refusal to take any defeat, no matter how overwhelming, as final—that makes a champion.

READ BIBLE MORE OFTEN, M.P.'S WARNED

OTTAWA (CP)—John H. Blackmore, S.C., Lethbridge, injected the Bible into a Commons defence debate Friday.

He told the House the old habit of reading the Bible in Commons debates had sadly fallen away just at the time when many people were bewildered and lost in the midst of a desperate struggle between belief in God and atheistic communism.

"Father of a boy lost in Germany," Mr. Blackmore launched a series of Biblical quotations by quoting Ezekiel to indicate that the last of man's wars—if the next one is the last one—will be fought in Palestine.

Canada-Fiji Trade Rises Despite Dollar Problem

Opportunities Expected To Grow Wider As Conditions Show Improvement

Written for the Canadian Press
by MARGARET ECKER FRANCOIS

SUVA, Fiji (CP)—Canadians who once thought of the Fiji Islands as merely a romantic, tropical part of the South Pacific, peopled by frizzy-haired natives and beachcombers, are awakening to the importance of the Crown colony to Canadian trade and business.

Since the end of the war, trade with the Fijis has increased steadily until, in 1949, Fiji did 17 per cent of her total trade, which amounted to $13,835,000 ($38,738,000) with Canada. Only two other countries exceeded this: The United Kingdom, 32 per cent; New Zealand, 18 per cent.

Canadian trade with Fiji in 1945 was $405,501; in 1947, $830,056; in 1948, $2,212,593; in 1949, $2,315,748.

At present, Fijian exports to Canada are approximately six times as great as Canadian exports to the colony. In 1949 approximately 8 per cent of the islands' imports, valued at $230,172, came from Canada. Items imported included fish, machinery, motor vehicles, metals, lumber and whisky.

Fiji exported to Canada goods valued at $1,985,491—31 per cent of the colony's total exports. Items included sugar, fruits and fruit juices, rubber and curios.

STRICT CONTROL
Lack of balance in trade is due to rigid control from London of the islands' dollar credits. Fiji is now one of the few parts of the British Empire with a dollar balance. British government policies, however, prevent the country using them to purchase much-needed Canadian motor vehicles and machinery.

"Fiji is starving for the things Canada has," said a leading Suva businessman, head of one of the large copra companies, naming cars, machinery, canned fish and lumber.

"If controls go," he went on, "there will be a large volume of trade between Canada and Fiji. It is unfortunate we cannot use dollars we have earned. Some of our industries are seriously hampered by lack of mechanical equipment."

Discovery of gold on Viti Levu, largest of the Fiji islands, in 1931, was an important addition to Fiji economy and now the export of bullion is second in trade importance only to sugar. The colony exports annually about $1,013,000 in gold, mostly to the United States. Efficient operation of the rich mines requires at present thousands of dollars worth of machinery which the country is prevented from purchasing.

In 1949 Fiji imported from Canada machinery of various types, including oil engines, mining machinery and machine parts, valued at $13,889, which was only a fraction of its needs.

COAL LED

Coal, 17,386 tons, valued at $120,178, was Fiji's largest import from Canada in 1949. Second was 30,921,120 board feet of timber at $94,869 which businessmen point out is less than half of what the islands could use. The $19,099 worth of motor vehicles and parts purchased from Canada was only a fraction of what could be absorbed.

Other imports included newsprint and paper products, fish, electrical goods, clothing, agricultural tools, drugs, manufactured goods, whisky and one fire engine.

The present low value of the Fijian pound, $2.80, has given Canadian consumers price benefits on goods exported by the colony to the Dominion. In 1949 these included sugar valued at $1,968,532; pineapples, canned and as juice, $14,827, and bananas, $1,795. Smaller quantities of ginger, rubber and curios were also exports.

Disease Reduces Muskrat Crop

THE PAS, Man. (CP)—Northern Manitoba's muskrat and beaver crops have been decimated by an epidemic believed linked with the abnormally cold winter, a game department spokesman said.

F. B. Chalmers said thousands of dead muskrats and hundreds of beaver have been found in marshland waters.

The disease is believed to be tularemia—rabbit fever—and has spread to at least two trappers. In human beings the effects compare with influenza.

Mr. Chalmers said a number of diseased bodies had been sent to Winnipeg for examination. On-the-spot inspections would be undertaken by a field party of biologists this summer.

The area afflicted extends down the marshlands of the Saskatchewan delta to Grand Rapids, Man., southeast of here on the northwest bulge of Lake Winnipeg, and thence northward in a 150-mile-broad belt. Some 500 trappers operate registered lines in the area.

Trappers who expected to crop 300 to 500 pelts this year took less than half of their quota.

Mr. Chalmers said the department is considering draining the marshlands and burning over affected areas before reflooding.

Game Bags Grow In Saskatchewan

REGINA (BUP)—More game animals and birds fell before hunters' guns during the 1949 Saskatchewan hunting season than in 1948, game commissioner E. L. Paynter says.

He bases his figures on a partial return of hunting licences issued last fall.

The 1949 take of ducks in this province was more than 122,000 compared with 118,000 last year; the geese bag was 7,200 compared with 6,600 and the prairie chicken total was 14,500 compared with 7,700.

The big game totals were: antelope, 649; deer, 6,147, and barren land caribou, 166.

Latest Tests May Increase Insulin Supply

OTTAWA (BUP)—The world supply of life-saving insulin may shortly be increased as a result of research being carried on by Canadian scientists.

The research work is important to the medical world, since the demand for insulin for the treatment of diabetics has doubled every five years since 1930. Scientists said insulin now was obtained only from beef pancreas, and that the supply was relatively fixed.

Canadian scientists hoped to perfect a method to obtain insulin from fish and whales inhabiting the waters off Canada's west coast.

Tests already had revealed that the most promising marine sources of insulin were halibut and whales.

In halibut, the insulin-producing specialized tissue known as islets of Langerhans was concentrated in a capsule closely associated with the gallbladder. The insulin content of the capsules was high, but the material required immediate preserving because of its rapid rate of deterioration, it was stated.

In whales the islets of Langerhans tissue was dispersed through the pancreas, a digestive gland. The average whale pancreas weighed about 75 pounds and for the purpose of the tests, samples were taken from 23 whales and frozen.

The material now was under study at the Comnaught Laboratories in Toronto. These studies would show whether it would be possible to extract commercial quantities of the drug from halibut and whales.

Bugles To Blow Despite Protests

LONDON (CP)—Bugles will still be blown at British army barracks despite parliamentary protests, says War Secretary John Strachey.

He was replying to members who described the blowing of bugles in barracks as a "barbarian uproar."

Group Capt. C. A. B. Wilcock, Labor member for Derby North, said in the Commons that at Wellington Barracks in London bugles were blown at reveille, at dinner time and on going to bed.

Strachey, denying there was any bugle-call at bed time, said "people often need to be reminded when it is time to get up, and they like to hear when it is dinner time."

THERE NEED BE NO STRIKE IN THE FOREST INDUSTRIES OF BRITISH COLUMBIA

Here is what each and every member of the Conciliation Board . . . including labor's nominee . . . recommended for 1950:

Because any tie-up in the forest industries of British Columbia will throw about 32,000 people out of work immediately and will injure the economy of everyone in the province, it is important that employees and the public should be aware of the settlement terms UNANIMOUSLY RECOMMENDED BY THE PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENT'S CONCILIATION BOARD. The Union's representative on this Board signed this report in full agreement with it . . . but the IWA policy committee rejected it, recommending strike action if necessary to gain its original maximum demands of 17 cents an hour wage increase and compulsory union membership for all workers in the industry.

Here is what the Conciliation Board recommended and what the negotiators for 163 employing companies have advised the employers to accept, with the best interests of the public and of labor-management relations in mind:

1. A WAGE INCREASE OF 9 CENTS AN HOUR FOR ALL HOURLY WORKERS EXCEPT DISHWASHERS, FLUNKIES AND BULLCOCKS, WHO WOULD RECEIVE A WAGE INCREASE OF 5½ CENTS AN HOUR. (The latter categories, working at safe and sheltered occupations, are not faced with the same clothing costs as other workers in the industry. The IWA policy committee maintains that these workers should receive the same pay increases as experienced key men holding skilled and difficult jobs.)
2. A MAINTENANCE OF MEMBERSHIP CLAUSE IN THE 1950 AGREEMENT. THIS WOULD PROVIDE THAT EMPLOYEES NOW MEMBERS OF THE UNION AND THOSE WHO JOIN DURING THE LIFE OF THE CONTRACT, MUST REMAIN IN THE UNION DURING THE PERIOD OF THE CONTRACT. (The IWA policy committee demands the type of agreement that would compel everyone to join the Union and to remain in the Union in order to hold a job. Employers have steadily resisted the principle of compulsory union membership as being against the basic Canadian rights of freedom of choice. However, because the Conciliation Board report was unanimous on this point, the negotiators for employers felt they could not now do other than recommend acceptance of the Board's proposed Maintenance of Membership clause, even though they realized it would be repugnant to many of their members, and no doubt to many employees.)
3. FOR THE LIMITED SUMMER PERIOD OF APRIL TO OCTOBER, A PERMISSIVE 48-HOUR WEEK IN LOGGING ONLY IN THOSE CAMPS WHERE THE UNION AGREED TO IT BEING WORKED, WITH THE FURTHER REQUIREMENT THAT WAGES AT TIME-AND-A-HALF SHOULD BE PAID FOR ALL WORK OVER 8 HOURS IN ANY ONE DAY AND 40 HOURS IN ANY WEEK. (Although operators clearly stated that there was not intention to extend the 48-hour week to other sections of the industry than logging, or to logging camps where employees do not want it to apply, the IWA has criticized and urged the rejection of this recommendation. It is maintained by operators that under certain circumstances in certain camps, the longer work week with overtime pay will not only help to keep mills working full schedules but will give loggers a chance to regain wages lost by severe winter conditions.)
4. A SIXTH SHIFT DIFFERENTIAL OF 7½ CENTS AN HOUR, PAYABLE TO ABOUT 400 EMPLOYEES IN CERTAIN CONTINUOUS OPERATION SECTIONS OF THE INDUSTRY, COMPENSATING THEM ADDITIONALLY FOR WORKING SIX SHIFTS. (The IWA is endeavoring to enforce in the industry a compulsory complete stoppage of all work in all plants on Friday nights. The result would be reduced production, sharply higher costs on the commodities produced and inability of the plants to give full employment on reopening Monday morning.)

Under the terms of the ICA Act, the Provincial Government has taken a strike vote in the industry. Since the public welfare is at stake, it is felt that the public is entitled to this factual statement so that it may judge whether or not there is any reasonable excuse for disruption of British Columbia's main source of income in 1950 and whether or not the lumber industry in these negotiations has failed in any way in its responsibility to employees and the public.

Scientists Split On H-Bomb Outlook

Somewhere Between Probable And Possible, Says U.S. Expert

By JOSEPH L. MYLER
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—The big question about the hydrogen bomb today appears to be: What kind of hydrogen do you use? Ever since the super-bomb became a headline, if not a fact, scientists have been coming up with conflicting answers to varied questions.

Some of them are:
Can it be made? If it can, how soon? What would it cost? Would it be worth the money and effort?

It is agreed that the only way to set off a hydrogen bomb would be to use the multi-million degree heat of a bursting atomic bomb to trigger it. The hydrogen explosion would have to "go" in a hurry. Otherwise the whole assembly would scatter and the tremendous temperatures and pressures required would fade before the hydrogen reaction got started.

DIFFERENT FORMS

Where there has been disagreement on other aspects, the reason apparently is that scientists were talking about different forms of hydrogen.

Hydrogen, the lightest element, exists naturally in two atomic weights—hydrogen 1 and hydrogen 2. Hydrogen 2, called deuterium, is twice as heavy as the other. But it is scarce. In 5,000 parts of natural hydrogen, only one part is the heavy kind.

There is a third kind, hydrogen 3, called tritium. It is three times as heavy as ordinary hydrogen. It is man-made, produced by nuclear reactions in the plutonium.

Hydrogen 1 is plentiful. It is a rich nuclear fuel. The sun and stars use it. But scientists say it won't work in a bomb. It reacts too slowly.

TIMING IMPORTANT

Hydrogen 2 can be produced easily in large quantities. It, too, is a powerful atomic fuel. Get it hot enough and it will react with itself in a split second where ordinary hydrogen takes millions of years. But even a split thousandth of a second is a long time—perhaps too long—as nuclear explosion rates go.

Tritium is expensive and its production slow. Some atomic experts say it is far too hard to get ever to be useful for weapons. But, they add, it would be ideal otherwise. It reacts swiftly. In combination with deuterium it would release considerably more blast energy in less time than deuterium with deuterium.

Quebec School Graduates At New High

QUEBEC CITY (BUP)—Quebec schools under the supervision of the Provincial Department of Education will double this year and triple in 1951 their annual output of 12th grade graduates.

A British United Press survey of schools under the department revealed that 3,162 boys and girls will graduate in 12th grade late in June as compared with 1,425 last year. Department of Education officials estimated that in 1951 approximately 5,700 boys and girls would graduate from the 12th grade (Junior Matriculation).

Superintendent of Education Omer J. Desaulniers said these results were due to the larger number of schools across the province, better teaching facilities with an ever-increasing number of qualified teachers and the application of "progressive" methods to the educational programs of the schools. During the school year ending with this month, 22,016 school teachers will have looked after 525,315 boys and girls in 9,161 schools in the province. (This does not include schools coming under the jurisdiction of the Protestant School Board.)

Michel Savard, Inspector-General of Schools, said great forward strides have been made in the past few years to improve education facilities and methods in Quebec.

Savard said requirements from the teachers had been more severe, but if more was expected from them it was because the school commissions had gradually improved the remuneration of both male and female teachers.

Male school teachers in the cities earned an average yearly salary of $3,100, while women teachers received an average salary of $1,850. In rural districts the salaries averaged $1,800 for male teachers and $900 for female teachers.

Old Fort Henry Draws Thousands Of Tourists

Restored Fortifications At Kingston, Ont., Recall Colorful Period In Canada's Past

OTTAWA—Canadians who think the world's greatest navies have always been ocean-going had better take another look at their history books. For Lake Ontario, a thousand miles from the sea, during the war of 1812 actually boasted a battleship of the line rivaling Nelson's Victory and frigates more powerful than any then afloat.

This interesting fact is revealed in a study prepared by Ronald L. Way for the Canadian Geographical Society. Old Fort Henry at Kingston, Ont. The study is published in the society's magazine, the Canadian Geographical Journal. Mr. Way, who supervised the restoration of Fort Henry and a number of other historical sites including Fort George and Fort Erie, and who since 1938 has been director of Fort Henry, graphically relates how this came about.

President Madison's ill-fated declaration of war on June 18, 1812, against Great Britain, found both sides equally unprepared for naval operations on the Great Lakes. The rapids of the St. Lawrence prevented the ascent to Lake Ontario of the vessels of the regular navies of both belligerents, and so their crews were marched up "by sparring handfuls" to man such craft as could be bought or built to float guns.

MANY CONVERTED

Early in the struggle cutters, sloops and schooners engaged in peaceful pursuits of commerce, were hastily converted to service. But even the largest craft were less formidable than the salt water vessels classed at that time as sloops of war—a rating below that of frigate. "Yet, before the end of the conflict," Mr. Way says, "Lake Ontario floated frigates more powerful than any on the ocean, and boasted a battleship of the line rivaling Nelson's Victory."

A powerful striking force made up His Majesty's navy based at Kingston when peace was signed. These ranged in size from the battleship St. Lawrence, a three-decker of 3,000 tons which carried a crew of 1,000 and 102 guns, to the little schooner Beresford, 187 tons, carrying a crew of 70 and 12 guns. Others in the fleet included the Prince Regent, the Princess Charlotte, the Royal George, the Wolfe and the Earl of Moira. Almost all of those were built at Kingston in the Royal Naval Dockyards, present site of the Royal Military College. "If the mere names of such ships do not arouse in our hearts a thrill of pride, the fault lies not with their gallant crews who fought and died on Lake Ontario," the author states.

Mr. Way says it was for the protection of the Royal Naval Dockyard that Fort Henry itself first came into being. When hostilities began, Kingston itself was inadequately defended, and a period of feverish building began. Gradually the fort took shape, but even after the War of 1812, during which no attack was made upon it, the structure was added to and timbers were replaced by stonework until eventually it became the strongest post west of Quebec.

CANAL BUILT

Bitterness and distrust, however, made it necessary to seek means of improving Canadian defenses against the possibility of a future struggle. The major problem was to secure an alternative, and safer means of communication between Kingston and Montreal than that provided by the St. Lawrence River route. This was realized in the construction of the Rideau Canal between Kingston and Ottawa, and although this resulted in the need of reforms at Fort Henry it was not until 1832 that the then fort was demolished and authority given to rebuild it.

Fort Henry, relates Mr. Way, was never attacked by an enemy, "but its history has not been lacking in colorful incidents." It was threatened during the rebellion of 1837, and in 1838 it housed in its guardhouse, until his execution that same year, the misguided Von Schultz, and it sheltered Imperial troops for almost 80 years. As relations with the United States improved, it became of little value and about the time of the Northwest Rebellion it was abandoned. In 1936, when Fort Henry was a great mass of crumbling limestone, a joint restoration program was undertaken co-operatively by the federal and Ontario governments. Careful research and painstaking workmanship have combined to produce results which professional historians concede to be as accurate as any similar achievement in North America.

Fort Henry today has no Royal Naval Dockyard to protect, but it does preserve a good part of Canada's colorful history. Mr. Way says that thousands of people visit it every year and that it is regarded now as one of eastern Ontario's most effective tourist attractions.

Flood Area Home Needs New Furnishings

This piano was hoisted to the top of supports where J. M. Radcliffe figured it would be safe from the flooding River. When he waded through to his new Wildwood home he found the river had risen to shoulder level, ruined the piano and other household goods.

Gulls Take 50 Hooks

AUCKLAND, N.S. (CP)—A local fisherman would give a lot for bait tagged "for fish only." While his back was turned, sea gulls swooped down on a 50-hook, baited line and started towing it aloft. When it was all over 10 gulls escaped somewhat the worse for wear and two had to be killed.

Hoe Uncovers Watch Stolen 44 Years Ago

HARLOW, Essex, Eng. (CP)—A woman hoeing carrots in her garden here turned up a gold watch and, tracing its owners by an inscription, returned it to Sir Ralph Reed of London. The watch had been stolen in this area 44 years before, Sir Ralph explained. The thief had never been caught.

Wild Dogs Kill Game In N.W. Ontario

KENORA, Ont. (BUP)—Deer and other wild game in the backwoods of this Northwestern Ontario town are being hunted down by another prowler as vicious as timber wolves.

Packs of wild dogs are reported killing off game in their hunt for food. Hunters said the dogs are teamed up with timber wolves to track down their prey.

The "flying wolf hunters of Kenora" — Jack Hodges and Walter Haynes — have seen the dogs in action and they report them as great a menace as wolves.

On a flight over Lake of the Woods the two fliers reported spotting a number of freshly-killed deer. They said they counted 16 carcasses and on one occasion had to scare off four wild dogs which had dragged down a deer and badly mauled the animal.

The situation in the district was reported serious. They urged the provincial government to take immediate action to wipe out the parasites before the situation could get out of hand.

Fruit Exchange Charge Withdrawn Directors Dead

Because the company no longer exists and because those who were directors when it went out of business now are all dead, the Crown has withdrawn an income tax charge against the Keating Co-operative Fruit Exchange. ***

The charge was withdrawn in Saanich police court by Crown prosecutor W. J. Moresby. Mr. Moresby laid the charge last March on instructions from Ottawa. At that time Alfred Langridge, Greenwood, was summoned to answer the charge. The case was remanded indefinitely when Mr. Langridge told the court he had quit the firm in 1941, long before the alleged income tax evasion. Mr. Moresby told the court Thursday federal authorities had made further investigations into the case and that he subsequently had received instructions from the Minister of Justice to withdraw the charge. ***

By ART STOTT

NEARLY ALL communities have one or two men who give a big part of their spare time to the youngsters. They may help the kids with hobbies or other interests. Usually they give direction and coaching in sport. Nobody knows just why adults provide these services for nothing. Most of them don't know themselves.

Bob Whyte, whose name has been associated with sport here for almost half a century, probably speaks for them when he explains his own attitude: "I just get a kick out of it."

Bob thinks this will probably be his last year coaching. For all his honesty, that sounds a bit like one of the old Harry Lauder announcements of a farewell tour. At 61 he figures about 1,000 young athletes have passed through his hands, mainly on softball and basketball teams.

THE IRON MAN of the Victoria West Football Club quit playing senior soccer in 1934. He started with the Wests more than a quarter of a century before when a young fellow called Stan Okell was busy organizing the outfit. He'd proved himself earlier at South Park and Victoria High in different games.

Bob enjoyed soccer and basketball more than any of his other sports. He played goal for the Victoria lacrosse team in 1914 and has tried other pastimes.

By 1908, with Charlie Mason, Herman Roskamp, Jim Pettigrew, Roy McKittick, Doug Campbell and Fred Carne, he gave the Y.M.C.A. the Pacific Northwest basketball championship in a series played in the old roller rink on Fort Street between Quadra and Vancouver.

In 1922 he helped First Presbyterian Church win the B.C. men's senior A championship. Those were the days when the Sunday School League carried the sport here and games were played in the Memorial Hall and the Y.M.C.A. With him at that time were Gus McKinnon, Ed Breckenridge, Bill Hudson, George Streeter, Art Boyd and Norm Forbes.

BOB HAS BEEN UP with the best in old time sport here, but he plays it safe when it comes to comparing the present crop with the old-timers. As he puts it:

"I imagine they're playing about the same now. We all think we're pretty good when we're winning."

He sees differences, though. When he was a youngster in the Boys' Brigade—that was a James Bay club that corresponded roughly to the present-day Boy Scouts but featured sport—the members paid their club dues and bought their own equipment. He remembers players marking out their own fields before games.

"I don't think they put the same effort into it now," he says. "They often want too much done for them."

The youngsters' reaction to sponsorship is "good, bad and indifferent," in his opinion. Some of them appreciate the help they're given. Others just don't give a rap.

BOB'S COACHING experience has been mainly with girls' teams. He finds them easier to handle. That's a different attitude to the opinion held by a lot of coaches. Some go nearly bawling with the emotional strains of girl athletes.

Winning games is pretty important to Bob Whyte, but not so important as building character and teaching his charges discipline. He figures it's a mistake to raise his voice. That doesn't pay, in his book. Just the same, the youngsters have to learn to accept the decisions of the referee or judge without squawking. They have to learn to do as they're told.

HIS SATISFACTION comes from watching them grow. Helping them to be sturdy in body and in ethics is his own reward. He doesn't say that sport is the perfect cure for waywardness, but he thinks it's a big help.

Men like Bob Whyte are important figures in a community. They don't have to be concerned directly with athletics, though that gives them a good field in which to work. Healthy boys and girls are usually interested in sport. Their natural inclinations to play and the pride they develop in their teams and clubs put them in a position where a man like Bob can do a better job in what amounts to promoting good citizenship. They're conditioned to benefit from a mature influence that fellows of his stamp can provide.

THE RESULTS go a lot further than just teaching a bunch of kids skill at a game. A sort of chain reaction takes place. The youngsters who were members of Bob's teams 10 years ago or more, are men and women now who can continue the job he has been doing. He's given them guideposts.

Sun Suits, Frocks Made In Winter Highlight June Fashion Show

Centre of, admiring glances at Victoria High were members of this fivesome in clothes they tailored themselves. Left to

Pupils Model Wearable Duds At Vic High

By AILEEN CAMPBELL

It was one fashion show with clothes you could really wear in Victoria—in fact they will be worn here.

Made, modelled and owned by girls of the home economics class at Victoria High School the dainty afternoon frocks, hand-painted linen skirts and sports outfits of every type and color were shown to advantage at the annual fashion show held in the school auditorium Friday afternoon.

More than 300 students took part in the general home economics and art department displays which contained everything from cheese boxes turned into ultra smart hassocks to leather handbags but it was the fashion show which highlighted all.

It was indeed a gala affair. "Note the line of this smart shirt-waisted frock and the crisp touch of white," said dark-haired Florence Berezny, one of four capable student-commentators who gave brief descriptions of the girls came onto the flower-franked stage of the auditorium.

Comparing notes just before the show got underway, on their costumes which have been in the making since Christmas, were Lois Pomeroy in her golden yellow two-piece suit; Glenna Bruce in a chic beach costume featuring a hand-embroidered mandarin coat and Pat Cameron in well-tailored shepherd's check slacks.

Working on fancy beach clothes for July, gave the girls no end of a lift last winter. Friday they were proud of the results, even if some of them stepped a little hesitantly to the front of the stage to have their minor masterpieces commented upon before the hundreds of fellow-students, parents and teachers.

"Sewing is the best period in school," according to Pat and Glenna, who are all for the extensive home economics course which in a four-year period teaches a girl practically all the rudiments of home-making.

MOTHERS ENVOIUS Mothers in the audience who had to learn how to cook, sew and make curtains after they were married, not before, must have sighed with envy at the advance preparation their daughters were getting.

"The aim of the show is to acquaint parents with the work and interest other girls in the course," said Miss Muriel Johnson, one of the home economics teachers.

"The course is a voluntary one." In addition to the fashion show the basement displays revealed work of the home furnishing, leathercraft, and art classes.

Following the show, tea which had been prepared down to the last cookie by the students, was served. Miss Berezny and her fellow-commentators, Sheila Murchie, Doris Gray and Ann Kipling, poured.

Miss Beth Ramsay, head of Victoria High Home Economics Department was in charge, assisted by Miss J. Irvine, Miss Johnson and Mrs. Frances Cameron, head of the school's art department.

P.S.—There wasn't a boy in sight. The male is apparently allergic to a fashion show at any age.

Library Wants Names Officers Victoria Clubs

Clubs, associations and unions have been asked to send the names, addresses and telephone numbers of president and secretary to the reference department of Victoria Public Library.

The department has a card file giving the names of officers of all types of organizations, service and sports clubs, fraternal and women's organizations, unions and others, which has proven useful to library patrons and staff.

"In the past the only source for this information has been by clipping from the newspapers, but all organizations do not necessarily give that information to the press," said Muriel Laing, of the reference department.

"For that reason it would be appreciated very much if present officers would supply the reference department with the information either by mailing, telephoning or calling personally at the reference desk."

2-Year Term For Burglary

Two years in the penitentiary was the sentence imposed by Judge H. H. Shandley Friday on Dennis Delane, found guilty of breaking and entering Gorge Vale Golf Club and committing theft May 14.

Two teen-agers, who said they had been accomplices, testified at Delane's trial they helped the accused break into the club where money was taken from slot machines and some goods were taken also.

David Sloan, defence counsel, asked the judge to dismiss the charge on the grounds that the Crown had produced no corroborative evidence other than that of accomplices. He argued it was dangerous to convict a man on the evidence of accomplices.

James J. Proudfoot represented the Crown.

Six Months For Attempt Break-in

A six-month, hard-labor sentence at Oakalla Prison Farm was imposed against Frederick Etherington of Victoria by Magistrate H. C. Hall in city police court today.

He earlier pleaded guilty to attempting to break into Stan-Fort variety store on Fort Street with intention of robbery.

Magistrate Hall noted this was a first conviction against accused and considered a six-month term would meet the situation.

Carl C. Kibsgaard, charged jointly with Etherington, is awaiting trial in a higher court.

Lions To Work On Sunshine Cabin

LOCAL PLANES TO BUZZ AT MODEL MAINLAND MEET

Seven members of the Victoria Model Plane League will take part Sunday in the British Columbia championship flights at Vancouver.

Twenty-three model planes will be entered by the Victoria group, composed of Alan Payne, Andrew Rittich, William Gelling and Brian Ramsay, all of the junior division; Ian Douglas of the senior division and Douglas Collis and Rodney McLeod of the open division.

Victoria planes are expected to do well. The local association has set several records in the past few weeks. Top prize for the junior competitions is an all-expense trip to Dallas, Texas, for the American National Model Plane Competition, to be held in July.

To Investigate Renewal Of Point Ellice Bridge

A special committee of the Chamber of Commerce was appointed Friday to investigate possibilities of renewing or improving Point Ellice Bridge.

Suggestion that action be taken was made by Harold Elworthy, local tug company operator.

Mr. Elworthy felt if road traffic across the bridge could not proceed at more than 10 miles per hour it was of little use "outside of producing fines for city revenue." He felt that something should be done to improve the present condition of the bridge or else it should be torn down and a new one built.

It was said the bridge was low, and was hindering development of industry in the upper part of the Inner Harbor. He said ships have trouble navigating up that far due to the lowness of the bridge.

Geoffrey Edgewood pointed to the Point Ellice Bridge disaster of many years ago. He warned that something has to be done before another disaster occurs.

Headed by Mr. Elworthy, the special committee consists of Forrest L. Shaw, Austin Curtis, Harold Husband and Duncan MacBride.

Today's demand for maps of B.C. is unprecedented in the history of the province, Lands Minister E. T. Kenney said today, in announcing the 1950 field program currently under way by the Survey and Mapping Service.

"Population, economic and industrial expansion are accelerating steadily, and if these growths are to be ordered and not chaotic they must be planned," the minister said. "Plans are based on maps, which must be prepared by the Survey and Mapping Service."

The service this year has undertaken legal surveys, topographic surveys, boundary surveys and air surveys in almost all sections of the province.

Job Picture Here Better; Need For Building Workers

Employment Bureau Says Fewer Applicants Now

The construction industry continues to make the heaviest demands for workers with many fully-qualified and experienced tradesmen needed, W. D. Rutherford, acting manager, National Employment Service, reported today.

A downward trend in the number of unplaced job applicants which has been unbroken for seven weeks continues according to Mr. Rutherford.

Number of placements made during the week exceeded the number registering for work by 64.

"In addition to construction, other industries and stores are adding to the number of jobs available by ordering replacements and temporary summer jobs," Mr. Rutherford said.

QUICKLY FILLED "With the exception of some tradesmen vacancies in which applicants are scarce, most jobs are quickly filled from our files."

Owing to the reduction of applicants and a small increase in orders, the overall ratio of unplaced applicants to vacancies has dropped slightly from 5.5 to 1 to 5.3 to 1.

Most job openings for women are in resorts, hotels and restaurants, although capable single clerical workers are still in demand, Mr. Rutherford said. Ratio of four women to one job still holds in the female section.

Mary Moilliet Dons Taffeta, Net For Afternoon Nuptials

Delicate white net mounted over palest pink taffeta created the lovely bouffant gown worn by Mary Moilliet for her marriage to William Ernest Smith at three today in St. Luke's Church.

The ceremony is of interest to Vancouver, home of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Smith. Rev. H. J. Jones, Colwood, a close friend of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Moilliet, 3821 Kremlin Street, officiated.

In the double-ring rites, Mr. Moilliet gave his daughter in marriage.

Her floor-length veil misted the wedding dress, fashioned with high rounded neckline and full of net bordering the slender bodice. White stocks created a wreath, clustered on either side with pink roses, for her hair. She carried pink roses and white stocks in her Colonial bouquet.

Identical gowns of pale blue embossed organza were worn by Miss Erica Nicholson, maid of honor, and flower maid, Miss Nancy Nicholson. Both wore crowns of yellow carnations and blue larkspur in their hair and carried bouquets of yellow iris, white sweet peas and blue larkspur.

While the register was signed Ken Cooper sang "Ave Maria."

Soft voiced Miss Lorine Bunting, Georgia born, and on exchange from Miami, Fla., where she taught first grade pupils in public school, has been a member of the staff of Willows School since last September. She first saw Victoria several years ago when she was teaching in a Seattle school and crossed to Vancouver Island for a week-end. She decided then she would return for a longer visit just as soon as she could.

Photography by Bill Halkett

"Children are much the same no matter where they are," Miss Bunting says. She is teaching a second grade class in Victoria, including pupils Sandra McKeachie, Bobby Proctor and Brian Wilson, left to right. Miss Bunting exchanged positions with Miss Joyce Applegate, who has spent the year in Miami.

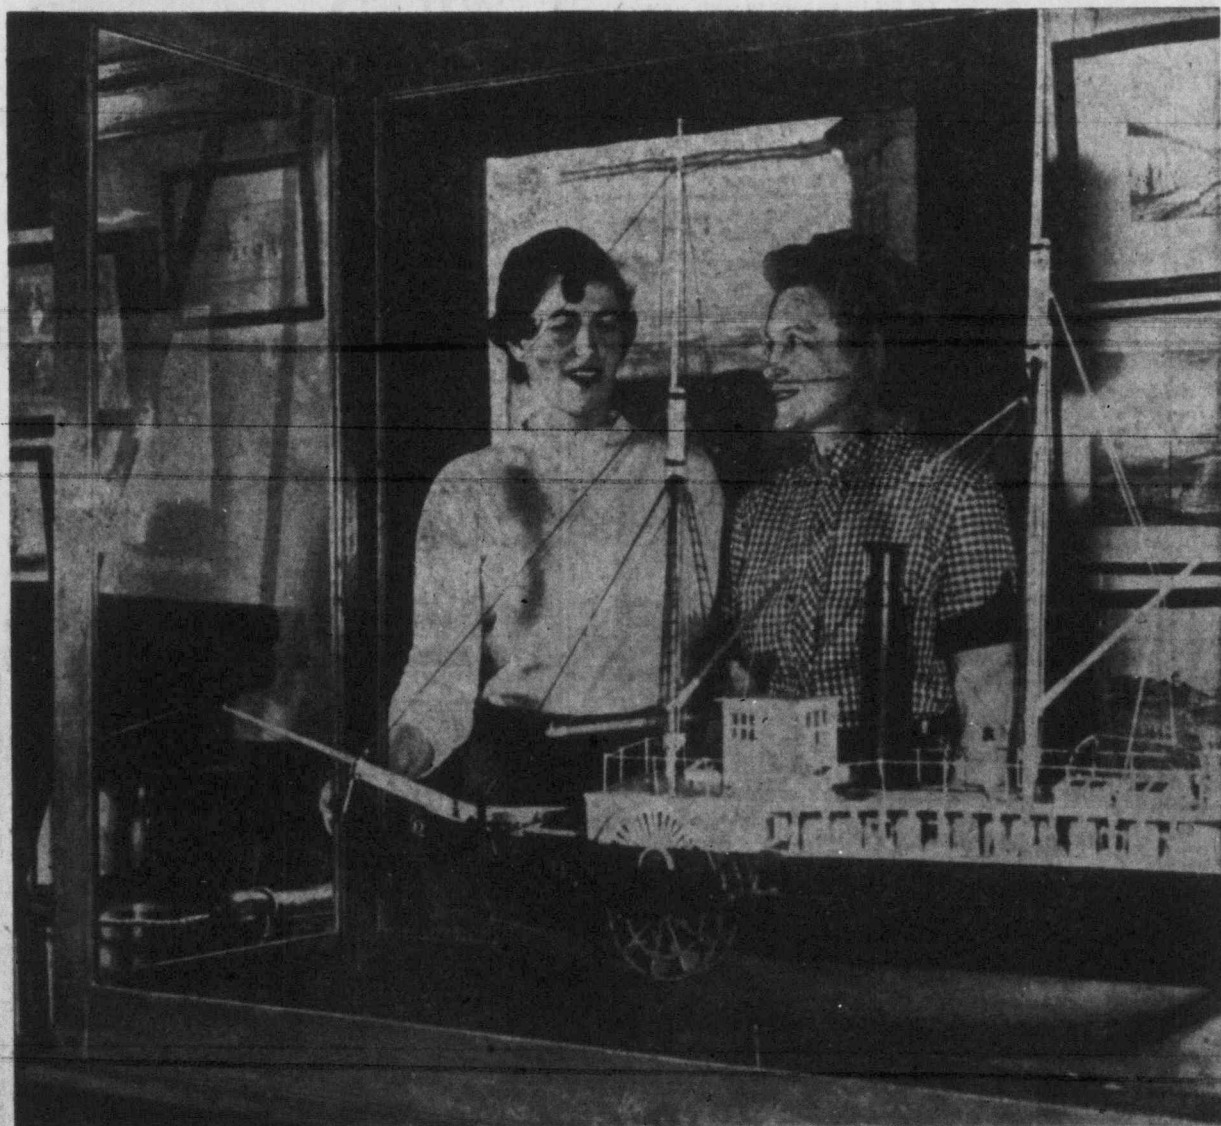

Exchange Teachers Traverse Continents

Two exchange teachers from widely separated parts of the world have spent the past year on southern Vancouver Island. They have shivered through the months of our "unusual winter," have watched a late Spring arrive and are now enjoying the beauties of early Summer . . . and they are loving every minute of it . . . Alert, intelligent, the two teachers hail from Miami, Fla., and Glasgow, Scotland . . . They are Miss Lorine Bunting and Miss Marcella Lindsay, M.A. . . . Their enthusiasm about the idea of exchange teacherships knows no bounds, for they say the exchange system gives them an opportunity to travel, meet new people, absorb new ideas, and observe different educational methods.

Arranged by
ELIZABETH FORBES,
Women's Editor

Forward-minded interest in educational system of the British Commonwealth prompted Miss Marcella Lindsay, M.A., to journey to Victoria this year. She left her home in Glasgow, Scotland and made the journey here with great enthusiasm. She has been teaching French and English in North Saanich High School, while Victoria's Miss Kay Baker has taken her place in Glasgow High School.

During her months in Victoria Miss Bunting has enjoyed delving into the early history of the city from the days when it was a Hudson's Bay fort. From Miss Pam Alder of the provincial archives she heard the story of the Beaver, early Hudson's Bay Company steamboat and admires a model of the pioneer craft.

Both Miss Bunting and Miss Lindsay have enjoyed Victoria flowers, both cultivated and wild varieties. And they say they will always remember the yellow buttercups and blue cammas that form a carpet in early spring on the downs in Beacon Hill. Friends they have made during this exchange year hope their memories will bring them back to Victoria again before too long.

DOROTHY DIX

Dear Miss Dix: I am a married man with a wife and four children. I have been fairly successful, but recently I have had reverses which necessitated selling our home and which have forced me to deprive my wife of some of the things to which she has been accustomed. My wife is furious over the situation. She nags at me all the time, reproaches me for bad management and criticizes me even to the children. This has got me into such a nervous state that I have about lost all confidence in myself.

Do you think she is giving me a fair deal, particularly as I am devoted to her and the children and have no thought but for their welfare? JOSEPH F. Answer: I think that your wife is giving you a rotten deal and that she is the poorest sort of sport. Any woman is a shrew and a quitter who doesn't stand by her husband in his misfortune and share his ill luck with as good a grace as she did his prosperity.

The woman who wants her husband to succeed must hold up his hands. She must breathe fresh courage and hope into him. She must make him feel that she has faith in him. For that kind of a wife a man can go out and fight the world and conquer.

But the woman who sends her husband to the battle with his ears full of lamentations over his failure and his heart bitter with the sense of her disloyalty has no fight left in him. Fair-weather wives are no better than fair-weather friends.

YOUR BABY AND MINE

By MYRTLE MEYER ELDRID

Here are some letters on various subjects which did not seem to demand answers of any great length.

Mrs. E. M.: You told me nothing that would give me any clue as to why the three-month-old baby is so averse to being taken away from home. It may be the way in which you dress or cover her which meets her disapproval. Now that it is warmer, it may be possible to take her out without a wrap or hood and she will not object so strenuously. Because of the vigor with which she cries, it might be sensible to have a check-up by the doctor, who will be able to judge why she turns blue and stiffens when she cries.

Mrs. L. H.: Hard, dry, difficult-to-pass stools are an indication of constipation. The diet may not contain the necessary laxative-type foods, such as fruits, vegetables, whole grain breads and cereals as well as some sweetening either in formula or foods.

Also, it might be an indication of some allergy toward the foods she is now eating. Allergies toward milk, eggs, wheat and corn are common, and either diarrhea, or stubborn constipation might be the allergic reaction the child exhibited. This is not a normal condition and you are wise to want to find its roots.

commentator, was guest speaker. She took her audience on a word tour of Britain, where she was a visitor during the general election, describing outstanding political figures she met and the reaction of the "man on the street" to results.

One of the things that impressed the speaker most was

City's Namesake Loads Lumber Here

Every now and then, ships named after seaports visit the respective cities whose names they bear. Such a visit occurred here Friday when the Panamanian freighter Victoria took on 600,000 board feet of lumber for Beira, Portuguese East Africa, at Ogden Point dock. Today she is at Cowichan Bay loading an additional 1,000,000 feet of lumber. Her skipper is Capt. S. Milliassia.

Stock Markets Still Advancing After Year Of General Gains

By FRANK KAPLAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer
Stock markets were still rising this week after a year of almost uninterrupted advance.
The bull market was going strong. Signs of bogging down appeared early in the week, but prices quickly bounced up, recovering losses and moving further into new high price territory.
This was the sixth successive week of advance for the market. The bullish tone is spreading into business. Optimism is on the increase in the business world. Unemployment figures in Canada continued dropping. Businessmen report bright outlook for the remainder of the year and some are saying present conditions should continue well into 1951.

Commodity prices, a basic indicator of future business operations, have been rising in recent weeks.
Activity on stock exchanges continues at a rapid rate. Brokerage house staffs are working long overtime hours.

Many observers continue maintaining that public participation is small although on a steady increase. Daily markets have become broader in recent weeks.
At New York the Associated Press 60-stock average closed Friday at 80.1, a gain of 2 from the previous Friday and the highest figure since June, 1946.
Canadian industrial markets also gained. In Toronto, industrialists showed an advance of 1.27 on the exchange's index and was at the highest point since the index was first compiled in 1934. Paper stocks continued feature performers on industrial boards.
Western oils were the most outstanding issues over the four days. The index rolled ahead 4.38 to the highest point since the boom days of Turner Valley in 1937. Interest has been on the increase in western oil stocks. Development news from the Alberta oil fields and construction of a pipeline to bring oil to eastern markets have spurred public participation.
Grain markets were mixed from the previous Friday. In Chicago, July oats sagged while rye and soybeans were strong. In Winnipeg, July oats and barley gained strongly and rye weakened slightly.

British Steel Exports To Canada Rising Fast

OTTAWA (BUP)—Canadian imports of iron and steel from the United Kingdom doubled between 1948 and 1949, and are doubling again in volume this year, trade department sources said today.
The sources estimated that British iron and steel exports to Canada during the current year would top 5,000,000 pounds sterling.

This is almost twice the value of last year's sales to Canada, which were priced at 2,629,000 pounds. It is more than twice the volume, since British prices have been reduced considerably from last year's level by devaluation of the pound.
The trade and commerce department quoted other figures today which showed that the trend in British steel exports to Canada has been matched during the past year in sundry other commodity fields. They included nonferrous metals for the past year are up from 2,003,000 to 4,564,000 pounds sterling. Coal imports are up from 163,000 tons to 306,000 tons. Purchases of electrical goods and apparatus are up from 733,000 pounds sterling to 1,406,000.
As a result of the British exhibit of machine tools at the Canadian International Trade Fair, shipments of British machinery and tools to Canada this year are expected to hit an all-time high record.
The British exhibit was said to be the greatest display of machine tools ever sent abroad for exhibition by the United Kingdom machine tools industry.
The Toronto fair at which it was shown closed Friday.

Public Meeting On School Site

In a statement to ratepayers, Percy E. Thorp, chairman of School District No. 63, assured them no site had been purchased for the proposed new Junior-Senior High School.
He said his statement followed a resolution submitted by Saanich sub-council of the P.T.A. asking that no site be chosen until a public meeting was called representing the three areas concerned. Such a meeting will be held, Mr. Thorp said.

ALBERTA OIL REPORT

Shell Plans Big Plant Near Calgary

By C. V. MYERS
CALGARY—Shell Oil Company is completing negotiations with the Calgary Gas Company whereby the latter will buy 20,000,000 cubic feet of Jumping Pound gas daily for use in the Calgary and Lethbridge system.
While neither the officials of Shell or Canadian Western have announced the plan as yet, it was reported by Felson Dixon, president of the Northwest Natural Gas Co. in the hearing before the Alberta Petroleum and Natural Gas Conservation Board Friday.

Mr. Dixon said that Shell Oil would build a plant at Jumping Pound, 25 miles west of Calgary, capable of processing about three times the requirements of the Canadian Western Natural Gas Company or about 60,000,000 cubic feet a day.
This means shell will have 40,000,000 cubic feet a day above Alberta requirement and therefore available for export. Observers in Calgary believe Shell must be convinced that export will go through in order to justify the large capital outlay required for such a plant.

Shell B.A. Whitelaw No. 1, 35 miles west of Peace River, has struck heavy crude after penetrating a section of about 300 feet of gas saturated sand and believed to be of Triassic age.
Testing 3,855 to 3,905 feet a rise of 2,910 feet of oil was recorded on a 90-minute test. The oil was thought to be about 15 gravity a little higher than most of the Lloydminster crude but of generally comparable nature.
Apparently a major gas discovery already, the well is aimed principally at Devonian oil production. Indications so far could hardly be better.
Meanwhile another wildcat, Imperial Superior Joseph Lake, has ended up in D-2 with salt water at 4,400 feet.

Wood, 1303 Gladstone Avenue, told police a taxi almost crowded him into the ditch at Bay Street and Tye Road and then drove at high speed over Point Ellice Bridge at 11:50 Friday night. Speed limit on the bridge is 10 miles an hour.

Park Too Cold For Sleeping

A penniless 17-year-old Comox boy who had run away from home with the intention to join the navy in Victoria, was found wandering about the city streets by Constable R. Gollmer of the city police early Friday. The boy explained he had gone to sleep in Beacon Hill park but that it had got too cold. He was permitted to stay at the police station until after breakfast. Rising Prices, Other Problems Face Phone Men

Rising prices and the need for expansion and increased staff facilities posed "tremendous" financial problems on the telephone industry, S. R. Mulhearn, deputy minister and general manager of Saskatchewan Government Telephones, said here Thursday.

Mr. Mulhearn, addressing the 21st annual banquet of the Telephone Association of Canada at the Empress Hotel, said the problem of raising money for purchase of new telephone materials presented many difficulties.

He pointed out new demands for telephone service continued at a high level. "This, coupled with the great backlog of work, poses problems for the industry which will tax the ingenuity and effort of all of us," he stated.

CONFIDENTIAL SOLUTION

Mr. Mulhearn felt confident the telephone industry would solve these problems with time.

The banquet, attended by 100 delegates representing major telephone companies in Canada, also featured an address by Finance Minister Herbert Anscomb, who spoke on British Columbia generally.

Mr. Anscomb remarked that "no business can prosper unless it can make a profit. He also pointed out that no country could be prosperous without telephone and other modern means of communications.

Save Many Yachts In Vancouver Fire

VANCOUVER (BUP)—An explosive fire which threatened thousands of dollars' worth of valuable craft anchored at the Royal Vancouver Yacht Club in Coal Harbor was checked after considerable damage Friday night.

An estimated $15,000 damage was caused when the flash fire destroyed three speedboats and three dinghies, housed along a wharf at the club.

No one was reported injured in the blaze, which was extinguished within 27 minutes.

The speedboat Kennel II was a total loss.

DOCTOR SAYS

Too Much Sun Can Do Great Harm To Health

By EDWIN P. JORDAN, M.D.
Written for NEA Service

The morning after the first hot Sunday or holiday of early summer brings to every office a crop of sun worshippers whose bright red skins and blisters show a lack of good sense in exposing themselves to the sun.

Strangely enough it is the same people who year after year forget their past experiences and over-expose themselves to the sun in spite of the discomfort which they have previously suffered. They ought to know better, but they seem never to learn.

Now severe sunburn is not only uncomfortable but can be dangerous. Furthermore, sunburn is no help to health. The sun's rays are necessary for the growth of plants and help in maintaining the health and well-being of human beings and animals.

One of the benefits which the sun can give is to aid the human skin to produce a substance called vitamin D, which is necessary for complete good health and which prevents rickets in children.

Gold, Two Others Face Spy Charges

WASHINGTON (AP)—A Brooklyn grand jury Friday indicted Harry Gold, Philadelphia chemist, and two unidentified persons on charges of atom spying against the United States.

The indictment was announced here by the justice department. In addition to Gold, the indictment named John Doe, alias John and Richard Doe, alias "Sam," and asserted that "the true and correct names" of these persons were unknown to the jurors.

The espionage information filed against him at the time of his arrest mentioned also a "John Doe" described as an agent for the Russian government.

This "John Doe" was alleged to have received from Gold atomic secrets which had been passed to Gold by Dr. Klaus Fuchs, the British scientist who has since been sent to prison in Britain.

Oakalla Escapee Still At Large

NEW WESTMINSTER (BUP)—A prisoner who escaped from an Oakalla Prison farm work gang Thursday remains at large today.

Police report a search of the entire lower mainland of British Columbia has failed to locate George Calne of Vancouver. He fled from a 12-man work gang removing ashes at the rear of the New Westminster court-house. He had two months to go of a six-month term.

PUZZLES & PASTIMES

Be Your Own Detective

BY CHARLES STOLBERG

LISEN, you give the knob another go, and no more of that 'you're too nervous' stuff, see?"

"Yeah, and snappy, or else—" added the other bandit, who held a gun at the head of the vault custodian.

The bank employee again fingered the knob, his hand still unsteady. Sweat showed on his brow as he fiddled and fiddled. Then the crook at his side chuckled.

"Ah, there she is! O.K., Mike, keep this shimmying bird's nerves under control with your rod. I'll take the bags inside and get the folding stool."

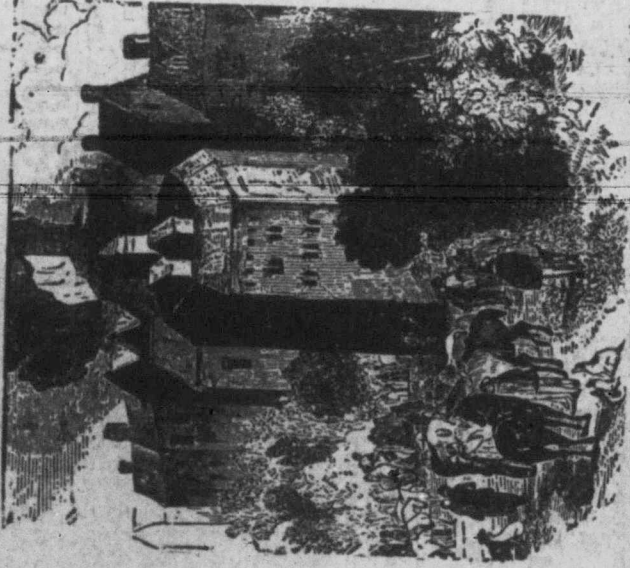

"Correct!"

From the heist went according to blueprint, and the getaway was on an alley back of the branch bank appeared a soft snap. But just as the hand's car was set to start, the leader bounded out and went back toward the bank. He explained, "Hold it a minute. I gotta fix something I forgot."

At that instant a guard popped suddenly from a bank's rear door followed by a policeman drawing his pistol. Thereupon the leading crook bounded again into the waiting car and it sped off in a swirl of shots.

Though the bandits escaped arrest for the time being, their leader might as well have left his starting card there. The detective on the case had him linked to the robbery. Getting on his trail and rounding him up together with others of his band was only a matter of time. What single mistake, not in the blueprint of the robbery, could hold-up artist have made in the otherwise well-executed bank stickup?

SHAKESPEAREAN Whiz Quiz

AFTER AUTHORS of the Bible, the best known writer in the world is William Shakespeare. Do you know enough about him to answer most of these queries?

1. The theatre he made famous (above) was named?
2. His wife, who was 26 when he married her at the age of 18, was?
3. His earliest successful plays were a social satire, L—, and a droll romance, T—G— of V—.
4. First of his "serious" plays was?

Compound Interest

FOR this interesting puzzle you are given definitions of two one-syllable words. These are to be compounded into a single word. For example, put "decay" plus "consumed" together and we have ROT plus ATE or ROTATE. Now compound these:

1. Wager plus gleam equals
2. To retreat plus unky equals
3. Distant plus noisy quarred equals
4. Snake plus anger equals
5. Mischievous child plus atmosphere equals
6. Kitchenware plus to attempt equals
7. To put on plus a locking device equals
8. A planet plus lack of humbleness equals

This Has Teeth

Joe just put a new regular circular gear in the machine that broke down. On the gear the 7th tooth is directly opposite the 23rd tooth. So how many teeth has the gear? You're supposed to work this out without a diagram.

How's That Again?

It was but I said not and. That sentence makes sense when you punctuate it correctly. Can you?

REGAL CONTOURS SIXTY YEARS AGO

QUEEN MARY WAS 33 LAST MONTH. THIS PICTURE SHOWS HER AS A YOUNG GIRL (PRINCESS MARY of Teck). Hour-glass waist and protruding bustle have gone, but the low neckline and "sweater girl" effect are still de rigueur. (See Page 2).

YOU CAN get dizzy in solving this latest labyrinthian creation of Julian Carter, unless you are careful. In any case, you'll get a run around. The idea, of course, is to start at the innermost chamber, designated by an X, and find the way to the single exit without running into any dead-ends that would force you to retrace any part of your route.

LOWER YOUR GOLF HANDICAP WITH GENE SARAZEN

For Accurate Long Shots, Spoon Should Be Most Useful Club

By GENE SARAZEN

Winner of Them All

MANY beginners are afraid of wood shots.

Yet the No. 4 wood is much more accurate than the No. 2 or 3 iron, of which it is the equivalent in distance. The long irons are straight faced, harder to control.

The Nos. 3 and 4 woods are used for long fairway shots from favorable lies.

The average golfer, who doesn't hit an exceptionally long ball, finds the No. 3 wood, or spoon, his most useful club.

So it is important that he learns to use the club properly, so he will have the greatest confidence in playing it.

The ball is played in, or just off the centre, with a slightly open stance.

Get away from the flat swing, or what we call low hand travel, used in the driver.

Note the position of the hands and left knee in the illustration. The hands are in closer to the body than would be the case with a flat swing.

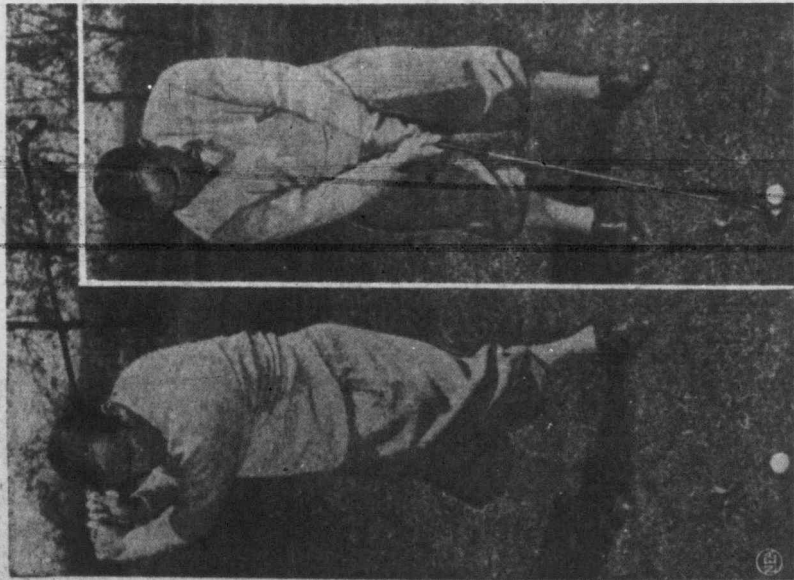

The knee is cocked to permit a fuller body turn.

HIT DOWN AS WITH IRON

Swing back straight away from the direction in which you are going.

Hit down on the principle of your long irons.

Because of the double eagle I scored with it to tie Craig Wood in the final round of the 1935 Augusta Masters Tournament, subsequently defeating him in the play-off, you might suspect that the No. 4 wood is my favorite club. The fact is that Gene Sarazen... hands closer to the body, left knee cocked. The ball is played in, or just off the centre, with a slightly open stance.

The No. 4 wood has always been one of my pet clubs. You are shooting for the green with these clubs so accuracy is your main concern. NEXT: Trap shots.

This American Wants To Make Paris Just Like Home

By PAUL GALLICO

PARIS—Lissen, I got a scheme to make a million bucks, and I'm betting you in on the ground floor. All I need is a little financial backing to get going, which I am giving you the chance to provide, but the idea is foolproof, and it's a clean-up. Hundred per cent back on the buck. We can't lose.

What we do is we get together and buy a little piece of property here in the centre of Paris, about a couple of square city blocks I'd say, get extra-territorial rights from the French government, put up our buildings, build a fence around it, hoist the American flag, and open for business.

On sure, I forgot—what's in the buildings. We lay it out just like the corner of Main and Walnut in St. Louis, with a couple of doctors' stores, a shoe parlor, and hatblock, the shoemaker put the coffee shop and waffle emporium, the delicatessen, dry cleaner, newspaper and stationery store, radio repair joint and corner saloon known in these times as Mike's Bar and Grill.

See? The idea is that the American Tourist comes over here. He's in Paris. But everything is just like it is back home. We'll equip our community centre completely so that he doesn't have to leave it. We make American dollars the legal currency and just sit back and wait for them to roll in.

Genius, eh? Where'd I get the idea for a little making money? Well, you know I'm stuck over here for a while, and I got around town a lot looking at different places and I can no longer remain insensible to the sufferings of the American abroad trying to get things to eat, drink, wear, or see the way he is used to them back home. I gotta do something for him, and incidentally, for U.S.

The French recognize his 'nostalgia and homesickness, but they don't go far enough. They allow an American newspaper to be published here; when he phones down to the desk to hire a car, or comes a big, shiny American hunk of tin complete with super-dynasty-glide, aero-ride, rocket-jet, sleep-spring.

They have learned how to make toast in the big restaurants patronized by tourists, though they hate it. He can get ham and eggs, or a hamburger rare, but this is only a drop in the bucket. For instance, the first thing we do in our hotel in the Centre is install a cigar counter with a dice game timed over by a blowy blonde with dyed hair and gold teeth.

COFFEE, HOT DOGS, NO GOOD. You can buy a lot of American magazines in front of the American Express Co., get ice water served at your table, go to an American movie, and have Coca Cola in practically any bar or restaurant.

They know enough to offer orange juice for breakfast, but the coffee is awful. Naturally we will put up a soda fountain where there will be a couple of chrome containers of real American coffee, or a bunch of those glass drip things standing on an electric stove, waiting for some one to come along and grab a steaming cup.

See? We'll still fly over from the States, and it has aged property and gone nicely stale. The hot dog situation isn't good either. We will, of course, correct that in our Centre. After watching the struggles of the young members of the tourist tribe trying to catch up with a decent hot dog on a roll, we can do no less.

A lot of the French cocktail lounges look exactly like American cocktail lounges; the waiters speak English, you can get American whiskey, but the fact remains they make an awful Old Fashioned, and they haven't any Maraschino cher-

Paris Again World's Cultural Mecca

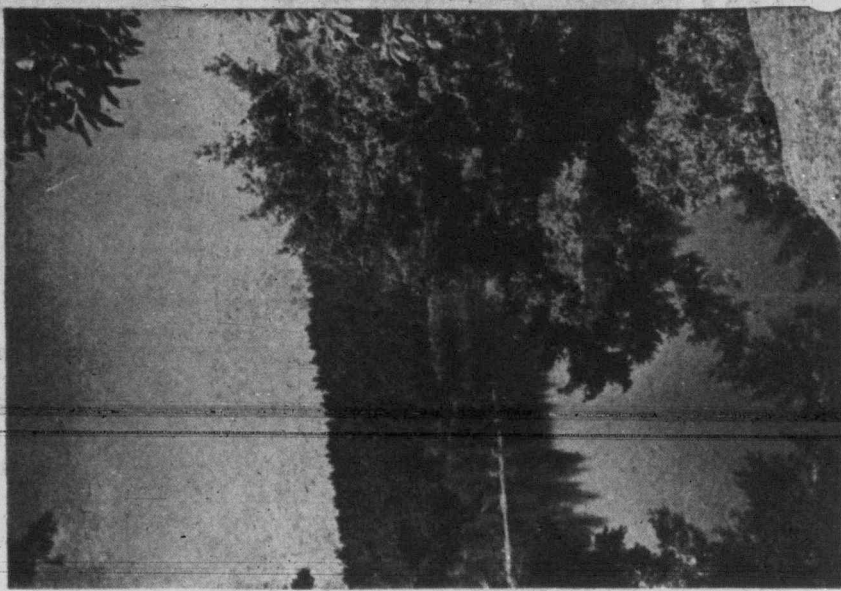

By ROBERT STEPHENS

IN HIS recently-published diary for 1942-49, the great French writer Andre Gide notes: "What France can and must give to humanity is the yeast which makes the pastry rise."

Matter" by the English novelist Graham Greene. In the concert-halls virtuosos such as Menuhin, Gieseking and Fischer play to packed audiences. Yet there is perhaps some difference in the present role of Paris. It is at the moment more a great leading centre of culture than a leading centre of art.

In French culture itself there is at the moment a pause. No great figures have yet arisen to match the surviving giants of a past generation. — Gide, Claudel and Mauriac in literature, and Picasso, Matisse, Braque and Leger in painting.

Among the new writers, Sartre, Camus, Anouilh, Simone de Beauvoir, Aragon, Vercors and Paul Eluard, who developed out of the Resistance into the existentialist and Communist schools, still hold first place. All are writers of power and talent. Camus has, perhaps, shown more signs of greatness than any of the others. Nevertheless, in spite of this, the new writers are fulfilling the role out-looked for by Gide, perhaps most of all because art and literature are still highly respected as forms of human activity.—OFNS copyright.

Island Life Is All Right But There's One Trap That Must Be Avoided

By W. E. W. WOODWARD

"The place is all right," but we can't find water," complained a neighbor of ours. His well was all of 50 feet deep, and represented exertion that could have been employed to better purpose. The house was better sketched, his fences were a habitable, and clearing hardly begun. He just must have water.

Each foot of that well represented another nail in the coffin of an industrious and determined, although ill-advised citizen.

My friend's reasoning had been simple and of a kind only too common these days when waters are running from all parts of the coast. They had taken some 500 yards away from his house, and possibly 150 feet lower in elevation.

The farmer next door had plenty of water. In fact, he had too much. It constituted his chief worry in life. Therefore, reasoned this sanguine soul, all he had to do was make a hole and the desired moisture must come pouring into it.

This man was no greenhorn. He had spent a great part of his life on this island, or in other regions similar to it, yet he fell into a common trap.

Every other island in the Gulf of Georgia is replete with similar incidents. Small islands support one half-finished and abandoned house, long winter months when every rock oozed liquid. Then came the summer, the pools disappeared, grass grew brittle and brown beneath a blazing sun.

Pines, oaks, and cacti revelled in a long time. If for sale, their value is vastly enhanced by the presence of that spring. Generally speaking, the available properties are those the first settlers ignored for some good reason. Shortage of water is about the most compelling. Therefore, it behooves the intending purchaser to look very warily. If he cannot find reasonable evidence of water, and does not feel like putting up the price for a drilling outfit, a further search is in order.

That search is best directed towards any place that supports older trees, and they will usually be found growing in gravelly soil, two rock strata. If not their more precious bedrock water away, too, to very great depth. Maples, oaks and very old cedars, however, are not found in desiccated areas. Unlike the pine and the oak, their roots crave water, and must have it.

It is also a safe rule that any beach beneath a sandy bluff, or at the end of a draw will have water. By following this up, the settler may be able to locate water close to his intended homestead. Anyways, the presence or absence of alders will tell him whether or not there is much and heavy digging in prospect. The lay of the land indicates the catchment areas, and the forest contains no deciduous trees, he will save time, and possibly money, by immediately calling in the drilling crew.

All absurdly simple? Yes, but so often and so widely ignored. Cultures are nice, in their way, but most of us like to think we acquired them to some purpose.

Putty which is dry and hard can be freshened by mixing it with a few drops of linseed oil.

FOR STAMP COLLECTORS

By R. NAIRNE

How To Detect Canadian Imperforate Fakes Of '24

SOME quite passable-looking fakes of Canada's scarce unperforated 1c and 2c stamps of the 1924 issue have recently been offered at attractive prices by one or two U.S. dealers.

What makes them particularly dangerous is that fact that they show no trace of perforation—usually a sure proof that a stamp is a genuine imperforate. For while one might be suspicious that a single specimen could have been a large-margined perforated stamp with the teeth trimmed off, a pair would surely seem to be the real McCoy.

You will get a clue as to how the trick is worked if you look at the catalogue listing of the coils perit. 8 vertically issued in 1924. For you will note that the 1c and 2c stamps are available in blocks of four. These are listed as sub-varieties. Scotts, and 257a and 258a in Gibbons.

These blocks come from sheets which were for a time available at Ottawa, and are actually half-cut across into strips, packed or gathered to form long blocks of stamps and sold in rolls of 500 to bona fide collectors. In automatic stamping machines, stamps in this finished form are still available today, though they are being rapidly superseded by meter machines.

Many collectors bought blocks and sheets of these stamps from Ottawa, and they are only worth about one-tenth the value of the imperforates of the same denominations. But some unscrupulous person noticed that vertical pairs and strips, if trimmed with scissors, would pass very nicely as genuine unperforated stamps, and no doubt many people are getting fooled by them. (Horizontal pairs are of course above suspicion.) Fortunately there is a simple test which makes it fairly easy to spot the bad ones. If, when you turn the stamp over, the lines of the engraving show through so that the design looks slightly embossed on the back, it's a fraud! The originals are on a thicker, softer paper, and are quite smooth on the back. Also, the gum is not so clear and shiny as on the fakes. The $1 O.H.M.S. is again available at Ottawa.

Unperforated coil stamps from which fakes of the scarce imperforates have been made.

JACOBY ON CANASTA

Big Hand Is Asset When Discard Pile Frozen

By OSWALD JACOBY

AFTER you have played Canasta a few times, you understand the importance and the value of keeping a large number of cards in your hand. This is particularly important when you are trying to pick up a frozen discard pile.

For example, suppose you have 20 cards in your hand. It might be fairly simple for you to hold eight pairs and four odd cards. Since there are only 11 denominations altogether (aces, kings, queens . . . down to fours), you are a heavy favorite to get the pick quickly when you discard. You may as well discard a pair of aces as eight different denominations. Only three denominations; and only odds are that he either will not hold enough safe cards or will not know which cards are safe.

Now consider the other extreme. You hold only three cards in your hand. At most you can have but one pair, and you may not have even that. It is almost impossible for you to get the pack since even if you are lucky enough to have a pair, the opponent at your right is not likely to hit upon that particular denomination to discard.

PROVIDES CHOICE

The advantage of holding many cards applies also when you are trying to find a safe discard. With 20 cards in your hand, you are bound to have a wide choice of discards. You will probably be in a position to discard a safe card. With only three cards in your hand, you may be helpless even though you are quite sure which cards are safe and which are unsafe. You may hold only dangerous cards, and

Ruff Makes Slam Contract

By OSWALD JACOBY

PLEASE settle our dispute," pleads a Detroit correspondent. "We want to know if this hand was bid properly. Also, please discuss the way the hand was played."

West opened the king of hearts and South won with the ace. South immediately led the jack of diamonds and let it ride for a finesse. That was the end of the slam. East took the king of diamonds and led a heart, and South was set.

"Would an expert play the hand this way? If not, how would the hand be played and why? Would the final contract have been good or bad? However, the expert would make a different contract by playing it differently."

An expert allows the king of hearts to hold the first trick. He wins the second trick (assuming a heart continuation) with the ace of hearts. He then lays down the king of spades.

Having found out that the trump suit is not massed against him, South knows that he can afford to ruff out the diamonds. He therefore immediately leads the jack of diamonds to dummy's ace and returns a low diamond. This he repeats with the two of spades. South continues by leading the three of spades to dummy's ace and ruffing another diamond in his own hand. Now he ruffs the heart with dummy's last trump, and returns by ruffing still another diamond. This drops East's other diamond.

Time To Try These Salad Recipes

By GAYNOR MADDOX

FOR LUNCH during warm weather serve salads made with fruit or vegetables. They provide nourishment, especially when served with enriched bread or rolls, and rests lightly on the stomach.

BRATENBURGERS (6 Servings)

Three slices dry bread, 1/2 cup hot water, 1 pound hamburger, 2 tablespoons finely chopped onion, 1 egg, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon butter, 1/2 cup milk, 1/2 cup cider vinegar, 1/2 cup sugar, 12 cloves, 6 bay leaves, 8 ginger snaps (coarsely crumbled). Break up bread and soften with 1/2 cup hot water. Add meat, onion, egg and salt; mix well. Shape into 6 patties and brown on both sides in hot fat. Mix together remaining ingredients; pour over patties. Cover and simmer about one hour. Personally, I like them with mashed potatoes and a big bowl of garden salad—tomatoes, cucumbers, two or three different kinds of greens—all tossed with a good French dressing.

Here's a recipe for French dressing many of our friends enjoy. We ourselves don't like sugar in our dressing but a lot of people do. FRENCH DRESSING (BASIC) (Makes 1/2 cup) One-half cup salad oil, 1/2 cup cider vinegar, 1 teaspoon salt, 1/2 teaspoon pepper, 1/2 teaspoon paprika, 1/2 teaspoon sugar, 1 teaspoon scraped onion with juice. Combine all ingredients and shake or beat until thoroughly combined. Chill. Shake again each time before using. Note: Add a clove of garlic or a liberal shaking of garlic salt for even better flavor.

RUB SPOT LIGHTLY To get rid of iodine stains, wrap a damp cloth around one finger, dip the end in powdered pumice and rub the spot lightly.

PREVENTS WRINKLES When winter drapes are stored away, hang them full length on coat hangers if you have the space. It will prevent creases and wrinkles which come when they are folded away.

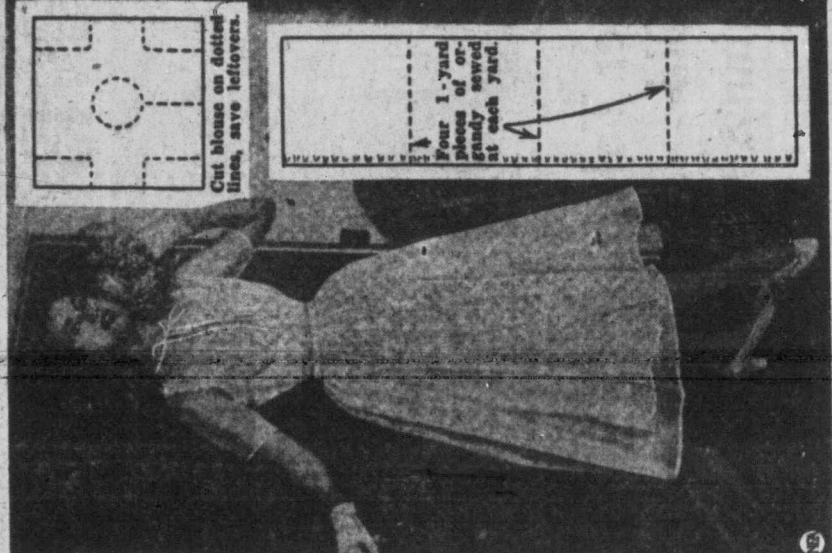

REMOVES POLISH Speedy trick in removing old nail polish is to place a cotton ball soaked in polish remover over the nail. A few seconds helps soften the old polish. Then a quick downward swipe whisks off the softened nail enamel.

Battle Against Moths Has Started

By ELEANOR ROSS

WELL, folks, the annual war has started—the battle between moths and conservation. It is an unrelenting battle that requires never-ending care, effort and vigilance. Thorough cleanliness and proper storage are the best methods of fighting the moth and its costly damage. Besides the warm air robs the pelts of their luster and the fur of its natural sheen. For household articles there is nothing like a good cedar chest, a few clean blankets, comforters, top clean bed sheets, wall hangings and such into its capacious interior and there you have it, a good looking article of furniture that does a perfect job of protecting your household articles. Even if blankets seem quite clean, it is wise to launder before storing. The way to keep them fluffy is to wash them in plenty of lukewarm suds and to handle them as little as possible while in the chest. If you are not using a cedar chest, store articles in absolutely airtight containers, and even these should be resealed with adhesive tape.

An easy-to-make sheer organdy dress posed over a pretty eye-let embroidered slip is a charming costume for graduation day or summer parties. Inset sketches show the simple pattern for dress made from five yards of organdy. Scraps left over from cutting out bodice (top sketch) are used for waistband. Four-yard skirt is sketched to waistband. Dress is left open in front.

This Sheer Summer Dress Is Inexpensive And Easily Made

By KAY SHERWOOD

RECIPE for a cool summer costume at a tiny price is to take a pretty slip, made to show, and to frost it with a sheer organdy coat-dress you can make yourself.

The girl who has less than $10 to spend on a graduation dress can create an ensemble which yields nothing in fashion interest to higher-priced dresses. Good choice for her is an inexpensive white cotton slip with a cambrile top and eyelet embroidery trim. Over this goes the sheer white organdy coat dress made from five yards of 36-inch material. The dress is simply styled with round collar, neck opening, short sleeves cut in place with the bodice, and a full gathered skirt.

Because it is open in front, and requires no intricate fitting, the dress is easy for a beginning seamstress to make. The top is cut out of one yard of organdy. Scraps left over are doubled and placed together to make the waistband. Skirt is made by shirring four yards of organdy to the waistband. Raw edges are bound with bias binding. If more color is desired, switch the color of the slip. Lingerie manufacturers offer slips of similar design in lovely pastel colors. Or tie a colored velvet ribbon around the waist of the dress. Sprigged dimity, dotted swiss or pastel-tinted organdy make a pretty substitute for white organdy used for the dress.

Methuen's Take Out Their 'Nationalization' Papers

By AILEEN CAMPBELL.
READING in bed is a time-honored habit, more observed in Britain than on this continent in the opinion of Alan White, managing director of Methuen's Limited, who recently announced his company's intention of incorporating as a Canadian company.

He was discussing the difference between American ideas of book production and British. "We are not in a position to use the millboard for binding which is in each country," he said. "In the first place, supplies are limited."

"Again, the British like a light book, one they can carry easily in their pocket or brief case or read in bed. Perhaps the British like to read in bed more than the Canadians."

In Britain, he states, even Churchill's book was criticized on the ground that it couldn't be read easily in bed. The British reader insists on a book easy and light to handle.

"However as part of our new company policy we are ready to alter production on titles which are in big demand over here."

Discussing the incorporation he said his company proposed to give the Canadian bookseller new service tailored as far as practicable to the requirements of the Canadian market.

The Rescuer Falls In Love

"Bridal Journey" by Dale Van Every. (Opp Clark Co., Ltd.)

A FAST moving novel of revolutionary days in America, "Bridal Journey" holds the reader's interest right up to the last chapter.

Frank descriptions of Indian tortures impart to the reader some of the horror that accompanied the Americans' attempts to break free from the English yoke.

The historical background of the novel is excellent with many of the actual leaders of the opposing forces introduced to give an authentic ring to the story.

Ghost Solves Problems Of The Family

"Dear Guest and Ghost," by SYLVIA DEE. (Macmillan.)

ANYTHING could be expected or feared from the woman who wrote the words of a song, the first line of which ran "Chickery Chick, Chala, Chala," but in "Dear Guest and Ghost," Sylvia Dee has produced a delightful piece of nonsense.

What happens when a family with improbable name of Fairbanks rents an old house on Staten Island, will keep you in chuckles.

There are Mrs. Helmut Boller, her daughter, 25, an erudite literary assistant who talks in quotations from the more obscure Greek and Roman writers, in high school and her husband, a traveling salesman who again with a fund of rich, ripe stories from the Pullman smoking car.

Finally is Leicester, a charming young veteran of the war of 1812 who was killed a few years later when caught on the paddle wheel of a steamer.

He appears only to Mrs. Helmut Boller to whom he is the essence of sympathetic charm, but he resolves the several problems of the whole family.

Most people, of course, don't believe in ghosts but are none-the-less frightened of them. Sylvia Dee's package of whimsy will make you wish for a ghost of your own.

Queer Tale Of Old Virginny

"The Bizarre Sisters," by Jay and Audrey Wals (Collins).

THIS is indeed a bizarre unpalatable tale without narrative power to sustain suspense.

The scene is laid on the isolated Virginia plantation of "Bizarre."

The authors, Jay and Audrey Wals, a husband and wife team, searched old letters, diaries and unpublished memoirs to re-create this story of an old tragedy involving a score of famous people. They preface their tale, however, with the statement that the particular branch of the Randolph family concerned, died out in the early 19th century.

Richard Randolph and his wife Judith, the latter's younger sister, Nancy and Richard's brother, John, famous later as Randolph of Roanoke in the public life of the States, according to the authors, are the central characters.

Crises in the night at a plantation of relatives and finding of a dead baby, led to gossip and finally a charge of infanticide against Richard and Nancy. Acquainted with the aid of such a famous counsel as Patrick Henry, the scandal followed the family to the end.

Judith stood by her husband, but later when he sought a divorce in order to wed her sister, she neatly overrode him with poison. Nancy married wealthy, aging Governor Morris of New York, only to have John Randolph, in a fit of rage, write a letter unburdening the whole sorry tale again. The book closes with Nancy gaining a measure of contentment and Judith preparing in fear to meet her Maker.

The quality of writing and skill and lack of crude detail, which made of the recreation of another southern crime, a thing of ever-growing suspense in "Frances Carter's Double Masquerade," is absent here.

Mr. and Mrs. Wals point a sympathetic picture of Richard and Nancy who were no more white-washed than the strews Judith. All in all, it is a story which is an uplifting tale of a sorry family whose history would have been better left alone.—A.C.

GARDENING

Cold Nights Shock Our Tomato Plants

BY CECIL SOLL

TOMATOES can be grown in any garden, large or small, provided a place in the full sun can be allotted them. If you have a garden spot that was once a compost heap, or an area where dahlias, gladioli or potatoes did well last year, that is the spot for Tomatoes.

They thrive in very rich compost the ball of soil around the root. An even better method is to set the root to which the correct amount of balanced plant food has been added. Many gardeners dig out a wide hole, about 18-20 inches deep, filling the bottom of it with rotted manure or compost. My experience is that an even better method is to mix the materials 50-50 with good garden soil for filling the hole.

Tomatoes cannot do well when the temperature drops below 65 degrees. The cold nights are expected here are a great handicap, and should rains occur in August or early September, the crop is sometimes spoiled.

Tomatoes will produce a good crop only during a hot, sunny summer and prefer temperature which is like their native Mexican uplands where it does not drop below 65 degrees while the plants are producing their fruit. For this reason, best results are sure if rapid-maturing varieties are chosen and if they are grown to a good size under cover and set outdoors late in the season to avoid the cool weather which generally does not end until the first of June.

Whether your plants come from a grower or if you grew them yourself, it is well to remember that the temperature at which they were forced indoors is much higher than it is outdoors now.

LITTLE WATER NEEDED

After this, little water is needed. Too much water will only tend to send all the plant's growth to fruit vines. Since a heavy crop of fruit should be avoided if possible, the tomato plants will be able to take care of themselves once they are established. Many gardeners use one large stake to each tomato plant, but this is generally insufficient to hold up the rank growth which comes with warm weather. The best way is to set three stakes in a triangle, each about 15 inches from the plant and tie the branches of the plant to strings or thin supports which are stretched from the stakes.

The most satisfactory tomato support is an inclined rack, shaped like a sawhorse. This is strong enough to hold the plant off the ground and saves most of the fruiting from frost is over (usually June 3-10) and the plants out now with enough protection. Any convenient cover or asparagus crates with very well holes cut in them, will do just as well.

Whatever cover is used, it must be set up every night around 8 p.m. and removed next morning about 10 a.m.

One excellent method sent in by a gardener is to take two sticks and put them down on each side of the plant. Draw a bag over the top of them. The sticks hold the bag over them, pressing on the plant. Tear a hole at the top of the bag to let air in and out. Put dirt or the ends of the sticks on the ground to hold it down. Then when the plant gets to the top of the sack, (say 12 inches) it is strong and needs the support of a larger stake. Don't remove the paper sack. This method prevents the slugs from eating young plants after they have just been set out and also keeps away most of the flea beetles, which usually infest newly set out plants.

The best size plants to set out are those that are quite stocky, with strong thick stems as big as a lead pencil. Thin-stemmed, scrawny plants are a waste of time.

SET IN TRENCH

When you plant the tomato, set it a few inches deeper than it was growing before, but do not disturb the soil. Never, at any time, should water from the hose be allowed to wet the tomato plant or the soil around it. Should the soil become too dry the ground may be irrigated sparingly. If this has to be done, choose the very early morning. If the soil around tomato plants is sprinkled with water, they are most likely to become affected quickly by a "blight" disease. The best method to provide adequate water, where the natural soil moisture is insufficient, is to place several inverted drain tiles, or flower pots, up to their necks in the soil. Let the hose run into these. The water supplied will soak underground and supplement the soil moisture.

GIVE LAWN DRESSING

In the flower garden, pinch out the tips of most annuals (stocks excepted) to encourage bushy growth. Dust roses with flowers of sulphur in the early morning while the dew is still on the leaves. Shape up the flowering shrubs which have finished blooming and give the lawn a dressing of good summer fertilizer followed by a thorough watering.—Victoria Horticultural Society Garden Notes.

Gay Garden Pinks Are Lovely And Easy To Grow

ONE OF THE FLOWERS which deserves to be more popular than it is, is the dianthus. It belongs to an old family, with many branches, all lovely, hardy and easy to grow.

There are biennials, perennials and annuals among them, none of which is exacting in culture. Carnations can be grown in the home garden, as beautiful as the green-house types. A strain of annual Chinese pinks, known as Dianthus Hedewigii, is especially recommended for garden borders, because of its uniform bush habit of growth, and brightly colored flowers which develop at the end of each branch.

The flowers are single, with flat petals forming a circle of 2 inches in diameter. A plant forms a mound of brilliant color, about a foot high. The colors are remarkably clear, and while some plants are dark red, most of them are pink of varying tints, marked with white.

If the flowers are cut before they produce seed, the plants will bloom all summer, and often live over winter, or self-seed, so that they renew themselves. A strain which has been selected for fringed petals is called Galety. There is also a strain with rounded petals, but similar in coloring to Galety. The seeds are as easy to grow as zinnias and germinate quickly, and the plants are as easy to grow as zinnias and color to complete with them.

Clove or grass pinks are the most reliably perennial group of this race. They are fragrant, bloom in early June, and will many years. These are the old fashioned garden pinks, which are not as brilliant in coloring as the new annual strains, but are most welcome when they come year after year, at a time when there is not much brilliant coloring to complete with them.

Leeks and celery need thinning sufficiently to allow the plants to mature without crowding. Leeks and celery will require frequent watering during dry weather. Sow broccoli seed now for fall planting, and for late crops of peas use an early dwarf variety. As each crop is finished, enrich the soil and plant again with a different variety of vegetable. For example, the space vacated by the early spinach and radish can be used for corn or peas.

Lettuces can be grown late in the season if one chooses a hot weather variety and provides plenty of moisture. Swiss chard is sown toward the end of the month in a rich soil.

General Garden Work To Be Done In June

By V. W. ARBER

PLANT squash and cucumber in well enriched soil, preferably in hills, and later thin to two or three plants.

Bush and pole beans may be sown now. The best method of staking the pole varieties is to use the "teepee." The seed are planted in groups and the stakes placed around them, drawn together at the top, and fastened firmly. This type of support may be termed "wind resistant," which is important in this district, and the weight of beans will not pull the stakes out of position.

Main crop onions should be thinned to an eight-inch spacing. Carrots, beets and parsnips need thinning sufficiently to allow the plants to mature without crowding. Leeks and celery will require frequent watering during dry weather. Sow broccoli seed now for fall planting, and for late crops of peas use an early dwarf variety. As each crop is finished, enrich the soil and plant again with a different variety of vegetable. For example, the space vacated by the early spinach and radish can be used for corn or peas.

Harvest Of Summer Breezes

By ROBERT CONNELL

ONE of the great charms of Nature is to be found in the unusual combinations of familiar things. May 24 was beautiful in its brilliancy of cloudless blue sky and as I was looking out at it over our little garden suddenly a sudden breeze sprang up and from the air was filled with flying blossoms as if a myriad of fluttering past.

The variety of movements combined with one general direction was very striking. It lasted only a minute or two; the breeze fell and the petals floated softly to the ground. In the background of petals and sky the moon showed its silver crescent.

In the thickets and fields that still remain about the suburbs the flowers are in their annual procession. The early camass is giving place to the later species. The former is one that makes such seas of blue in the grassy meadows of the Uplands and in Beacon Hill Park.

This common camass is distinguished from the other, Leichthol's, by smaller size and by the manner in which the lower petal stands a little apart, as it were from the other four. With the common camass the western buttercup is usually associated, and the blue and gold coloring of the mingled two is one of the most effective features in our spring landscape. Occasionally, or perhaps it is better to say rarely, a white form of Leichthol's camass is to be found.

BUTTERCUP VARIETIES

In the low-lying fields a second buttercup is now to be seen and one well worth attention. It is a deeper yellow than the western. But what chiefly distinguishes it on close examination is that the styles which are clustered in the heart of the flower are straight instead of being hooked as in the western, and this has earned it the botanical name which means "straight-beaked".

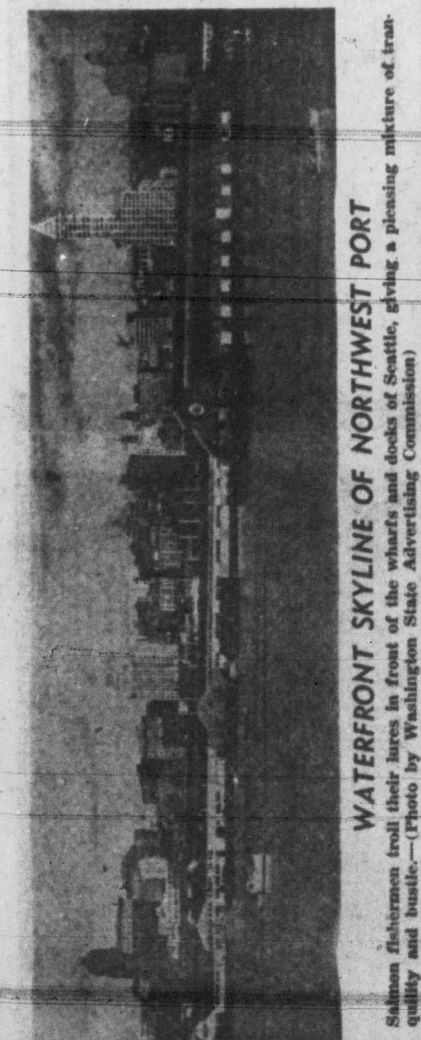

The leaves are also different. Having the segments finely cut. This species is sometimes found with some color variations of the petals.

One plant I came across some years ago had the back or underside of chocolate-brown. I grew it in the garden for a year or so but the operation of a year-chang-plant removal was fatal to it.

Our friends from the prairie provinces will be glad to see that old favorite the saskatoon in its charming array of snowy flower-clusters. It grows fairly plentifully in the Pemberton Woods and elsewhere.

Unfortunately in our dry summer climate the fruit is not as a rule so sweet and juicy as in the middle west. Like our wild roses it sometimes comes into second flowering late in the season. On August 8, 1930, I found a bush in bloom on Burnside Road.

The salmonberry is an early bloomer. Its rosy flowers appearing in some years as early as March, and the flowering often persists. Only yesterday I found both flowers and green fruit on some of the local bushes. The bird-cherry or Indian plum comes very early into flower, sometimes as early as February, and now the bunches of small fruits are red on one side and green on the other.

When Soil Is Right Watering Under Cloches Is Unnecessary

By J. L. H. CHASE

THERE ARE still many gardeners, some growers as well as amateurs, who do not understand how water reaches crops under cloches. They think that because the surface soil is dry the crops must be short of moisture. What is so often not realized is that cloches do not keep water away from the crop but merely deflect it up to a maximum of 11 inches in the case of the widest cloches.

The water runs down the side of the cloches into the soil and then not only straight down but also laterally, spreading out gradually to the centre of the cloche. The speed of lateral movement depends on the nature of the soil, and particularly on the humus content.

If you spill a drop of ink on a sheet of shiny paper, it remains on the surface and the blot grows no bigger. If you spill another drop on a sheet of newspaper, because the ink soaks through, the blot becomes a large, irregular shape. If you spill a drop of ink on a piece of blotting paper, it will spread to many times its own size. What happens in the soil is very much the same. If the soil is pure sand, the water goes practically straight down with little sideways spread; if the soil is pure compost, the lateral spread is very rapid indeed, except actually on the surface.

ROOTS SPREAD WIDE

Now we turn to the receiving end — the roots under the cloches. They not only go straight down, but also extend sideways. In the case of many plants like the lettuce the roots spread for about one foot in every direction at a depth of two to three inches below the surface. So the water moves in from the outside to the centre, and the roots move out from the centre toward the water. In practice therefore, once the seeds have germinated and pushed their rootlets down, they will receive all the water they need and the cloches will not deprive them of any moisture at all.

There are only two things which may prevent the water from reaching into the soil and reaching the roots of the plants. The first is when the cloches are placed on a very steep slope with the case of the water running down the hill, it will run off straight down the hill. The second danger is that the water will run down and collect in pools at the water stands about in pools that evaporates instead of sinking into the soil. The answer to both these difficulties is to keep the soil just outside the glass well hoed, so as to make sure that the water

How To Grow Those Large Calceolarias

By W. L. ARNALL

AFTER seeing such a fine display of potted calceolarias at our spring show, perhaps some of you who have a small heated greenhouse would like to grow a few.

Although the seed may be sown from May to July, a June sowing is generally considered the best. The seed pan is prepared with a good porous loam. After the surface is leveled it is covered with a thin layer of fine white sand to enable you to spread the very fine seed just over the surface. The sand is not necessary, but the even distribution of the seed is, because the uneven growth of the seedlings makes pricking-out a job which grows unchecked. To keep the plants growing more desirable in a pot plant. Support for each branch is necessary because of the weight of the flowers. Aphids are very partial to calceolarias. To keep the plants clean a regular spray program must be followed. Temperature during the winter months, should be kept between 45 and 90 degrees F., extreme heat is injurious—Victoria Horticultural Society Garden Notes.

Not be administered wholesale, but rather as frequent gentle sprinklings.

Immediately on the appearance of the second leaf start pricking-off pots of flats. Delicate handling is necessary, and a pen with the nib firmly pressed into the holder, makes a handy tool for the job.

From the flats the young plants are moved to 3-inch pots, and in December or January to 5's. Soil should be slightly acid, consisting of 3 parts loam, 2 parts well-rotted cow manure, 1 part sand, with a 4-12-4 fertilizer added. Careful watering is necessary until the new roots have formed.

The plants may be allowed to grow unchecked, but pinching more desirable in a pot plant. Support for each branch is necessary because of the weight of the flowers. Aphids are very partial to calceolarias. To keep the plants clean a regular spray program must be followed. Temperature during the winter months, should be kept between 45 and 90 degrees F., extreme heat is injurious—Victoria Horticultural Society Garden Notes.

Nelson 'Like A Rat' Impaled On A Pole

By PETER ELIOT

OF CABBAGES AND KINGS

LONDON means different things to different people; to Shelley it was a hell, to Cobbett a monster, to Tennyson a kindly nurse. Disraeli called it a nation, William Dunbar called it the flower of cities all ("Garden of all jasper of Jouditide").

"No other capital city (writes Alan Bott in the introduction to THE LONDONER'S ENGLAND — which includes 89 plates by contemporary artists) has adopted so purely joyal, but part (quarantined as it is) of London—Scott who alit one day a year to dinner, two or three more to lunch, racial footstep, and the rest. There as lived by them London handlings as by Patsy Gannon and Berlin Eavans; some become Parisians or Berliners, some remain unchanged Gascon or Bavarian."

Nelson's column, like St. Paul's and Big Ben, is something of a symbol of London to Londoners and a source of pride to every one who visits it. It is a monument of blue in the grassy meadows of the Uplands and in Beacon Hill Park.

This common camass is distinguished from the other, Leichthol's, by smaller size and by the manner in which the lower petal stands a little apart, as it were from the other four. With the common camass the western buttercup is usually associated, and the blue and gold coloring of the mingled two is one of the most effective features in our spring landscape. Occasionally, or perhaps it is better to say rarely, a white form of Leichthol's camass is to be found.

FIRST THEATRE ROYAL

Another landmark is THE THEATRE ROYAL, Drury Lane, one of the famous theatres of the Western World. But it is the second, not the first theatre, which is famous. The first was built in the reign of Charles II for Thomas Killigrew and his company and opened with Beaumont and Fletcher's THE HUMOROUS LIEUTENANT.

Ned Gwyn appeared in this play later, and Pevs records that he kissed her in the theatre. It was burnt in 1672, completely rebuilt for its second and greatest era. There were attempted assassinations of both George II and George III inside it.

Sheridan was manager from 1776, soon becoming its chief proprietor. While at the House of Commons in 1809 that great actor heard that the theatre was burning; and the oft-told tale is that, having hurried there and found it impossible to save the building, he slipped wine in a coffee-house opposite. A friend praised his coolness; to which Sheridan rejoined, "May a man not be allowed to drink a glass of wine at his own fireside?"

The most interesting feature of this fascinating book is the association of a familiar literary and historical figures with buildings and places still standing.

Louisa Circus, a real life-come (1874-1875) gets its name from King Lud of Celtic myth. Excavations by Sir Christopher Wren revealed a large Saxon cemetery, beneath which were Celtic remains above a lower layer of Roman remains and the King Lud Tavern.

Only yesterday I found both flowers and green fruit on some of the local bushes. The bird-cherry or Indian plum comes very early into flower, sometimes as early as February, and now the bunches of small fruits are red on one side and green on the other.

the demagogue, and Robert Walpole, a reformer. A plaque marks the place where Edgar Wallace sold newspapers as a boy.

Staple Inn, another famous institution, once had Dr. Johnson as a lodger in 1759 (when Wolfe was waiting his chance across the St. Lawrence to catch Montcalm's army). The old Doctor recorded it in a letter he wrote to Miss Porter: "I have this day moved my abode to Staple Inn, London... book which I will publish a little story is out." This was KASSERAS, written in the evenings of one week to meet the expenses of his mother's illness and funeral.

NO RUDE BOYS

Staple Inn is described by another writer, Dickens, in THE MISERY OF EDWIN DROOD, where Mr. Greengrass has offices in the inner quadrangle "Behind the most ancient part of Holborn... is a little nook composed of two irregular quadrangles, called Staple Inn. It is one of those nooks the turning into which out of the Clashing street imparts to the relieved pedestrian the sensation of having put on his boots."

It is one of those nooks where a few smoky sparrows twitter in smoky trees, as though they called to one another, "Let us play at garden-mould and a few yards of gravel enable them to do that refreshing violence to their tiny undertakings."

Staple Inn, partly damaged by a bomb in the recent war, has managed to retain its ancient character. An old notice-board, preserved under the archway from High Holborn, reads: "The porter has orders to prevent old clothes men and others from calling articles for sale. Also ruled children playing, etc. No horses allowed within this Inn."

BACKGROUND OF NOVELS

Shepherd Market is an odd little place, only two hundred yards from Piccadilly (up White Horse Street). It has been used as a background for more than a few contemporary novels, including the late Sir Hugh Walpole's THE JOYFUL BELIEF. In the late twenties its name went round the world bringing thousands of American tourists, attracted by its associations with the GREEN HAT, a best-seller in that era.

Berkeley Square is another district with a literary past. For two centuries it has been synonymous with Thackeray's Marquis of Squares. It was depicted in the SQUARED PAPER as "Buckley Square," Lord Clive of India killed himself at No. 45, and other residents include Horace Walpole, Charles James Fox and Lord Brougham. Anthony Trollope in 1867 was elected to the Cosmopolitan, a political and literary club that met twice a week in Charles Street, which runs into the square, and supplied to its members and their friends "Tea and Brandy and Water with-out charge."

Looking back a decade to the first modest concert given by the orchestra at the Empress Hotel, who would have dared to prophesy at that time, that there would even be a tenth anniversary let alone the possibility of such a season's program as this!

Entertainment Quiz On Visitors Would Enlighten

By AUDREY ST. D. JOHNSON

IT IS INEVITABLE that in a city by the sea, and a city of gardens, the summer months, apart from the small, boats, fish and assorted sports equipment.

So Victoria, blessed with abundant resort qualifications and cool nights, is unlikely ever to offer much support to summer theatre or summer concerts. Experimental facilities — Starlight Theatre and Beacon Hill band concerts — provide residents with the right kind of musical-dramatic fare in the right quantity to fill the need.

In short, two weeks of light-hearted, romantic operetta and Sunday afternoon spent strolling in the park to a background of day-on-the-ear "pops" music leaves us satisfied but not asking for more.

It would be interesting however, to find out what our all-important tourists think about evening entertainment in this city. It has been suggested that short programs of music, drama or mixed, commencing at nine o'clock when the best of the daylight hours have departed, might prove highly popular with summer visitors.

We believe this to be true; but unfortunately the cost of experimentation is at a particularly low ebb just now, so we probably never will know how the tourists would take to the idea!

Starlight Theatre, incidentally, will be three years old this summer, and, we hope, three times as well supported, though no one could have grunged at the size of audience it attracted last year.

The return of two outstanding favorites from last season, tall handsome Richard Charles, pulse-striving tenor, and Ann Andre, winsome soprano, and a sweet petite, will spice public interest in the four scheduled productions. These include the ever-beloved "Blossomtime" with its Schubert-inspired score, and a revival of one of the longest run operettas in history, the "Chinese Girl." This "China-Club" "Only 'Oklaheba'" has captured the run of this World War I process to date.

For a spectacle point-of-view it is certainly one of the lushest operettas ever to grace the London and New York stages and presents opportunity for some stunning ballet.

ATTRACTIVE FOLDER

Looking still further ahead than Starlight Theatre, it is obvious that musical Victoria has a treat in store in next season's offerings—all being well, and events materializing as promised.

And, by the way, any reader who has not seen the attractive folder announcing the Tenth Anniversary Season of the Victoria Symphony Orchestra, should get one next time they're in town.

They are worth perusing, worth keeping and worth sending to a friend as a memento of the year of a province's artistic life of this city. Of the eight concerts, all firmly dated, seven will be given by the Victoria Symphony and three of these offer guest artists.

In February, there will occur what will probably be one of the most memorable events in our musical history: the performance with massed chorus and orchestra of Mozart's immortal "Requiem Mass."

Looking backward a decade to the first modest concert given by the orchestra at the Empress Hotel, who would have dared to prophesy at that time, that there would even be a tenth anniversary let alone the possibility of such a season's program as this!

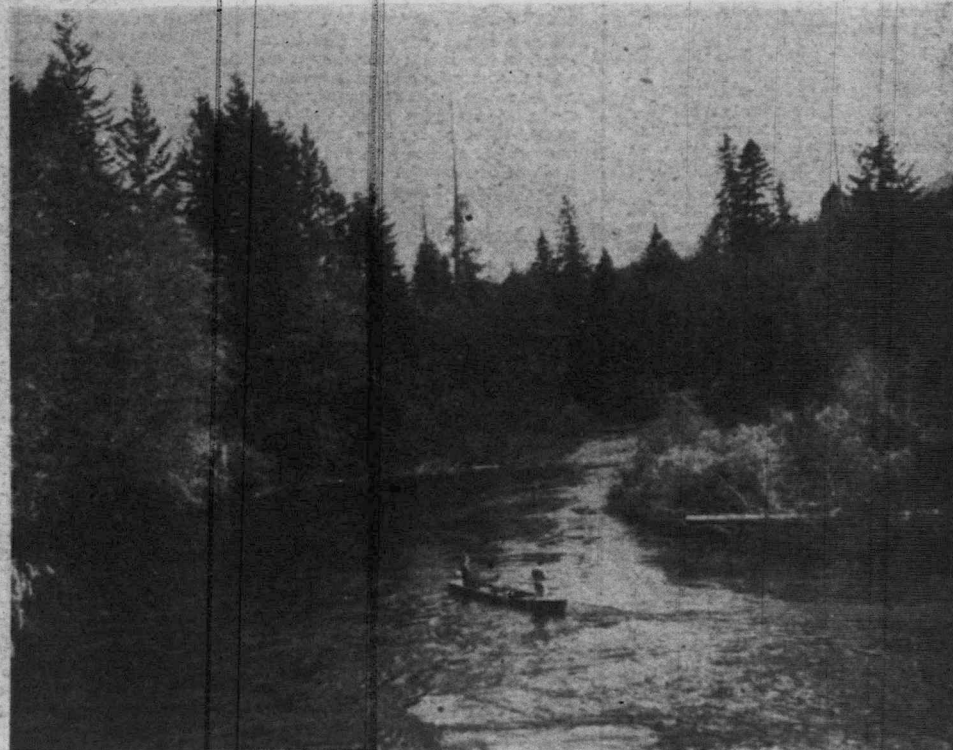

CUSTARD PIE PUNISHMENT—FOR CHARITY

Pauline Sandiman volunteered to go into the stocks for five minutes at Knowle (Warwickshire) Charity Carnival, and allowed customers to throw custard pies at her. It was sticky and messy, but Pauline took it all in good part—because each throw meant another coin for charity.—(Mirrorple)

PATIENCE—REWARDED

Mr. and Mrs. George Mann cast their lines upon the waters of Cowichan River, above. George is rewarded with a strike and a pound and a half cut-throat trout (below) is hauled into the boat.

CHOICE SPOT FOR VANCOUVER ISLAND FISHERMEN

One of the hot spots for trout fishermen in the spring and fall is the Cowichan River just where it spills out of the lake. At the height of the season many anglers quickly catch their limits, and the fish range up to four and five pounds—sometimes bigger.

'THIS LOOKS INTERESTING'

Lorraine Whitford found the day sunny and warm. That big bath looked inviting. She waded in cautiously.

'GOODNESS, HOW WET IT FEELS'

The stream was warm and the 12-month-old Lorraine having her first paddle became more venturesome.

'NOW THAT'S REAL FUN'

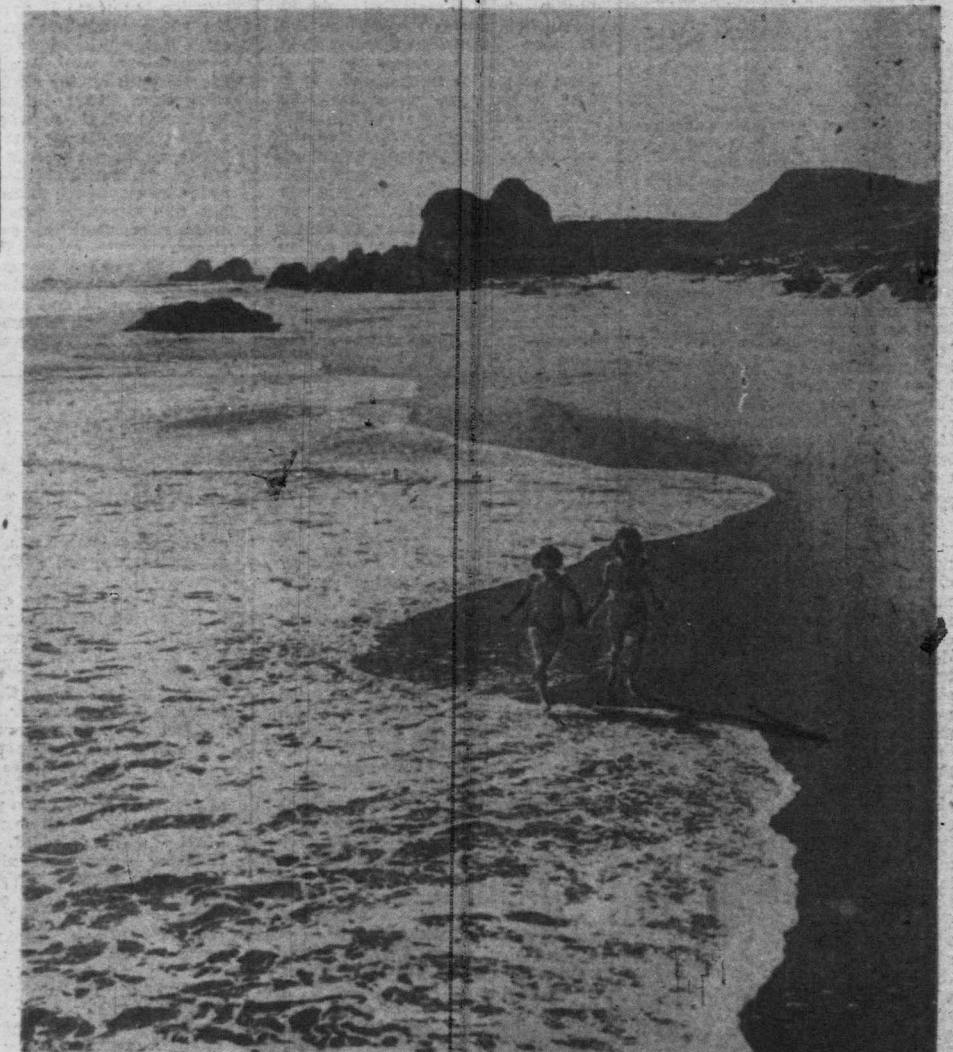

With the pail full of water and her ball floating downstream, Lorraine was in seventh heaven.—(Mirrorple)

HE BUYS THEM BY THE POUND

Garage owner James A. Chambers of Memphis, Tenn., presents a new dog, just rescued from the city pound, to little Ann Marie Williams. Learning that the pound had hundreds of pets that must be disposed of, Chambers put up the money for 200 youngsters to bail out dogs and claim them for their own.
